TALES of the FIVE TOWNS by ARNOLD BENNETT Enoch Arnold Bennett, 2016-06-14 It was an amiable but deceitful afternoon in the third week of December Snow fell heavily in the windows of confectioners shops and Father Christmas smiled in Keats s Bazaar the fawning smile of a myth who knows himself to be exploded but beyond these and similar efforts to remedy the forgetfulness of a careless climate there was no sign anywhere in the Five Towns and especially in Bursley of the immediate approach of the season of peace goodwill and gluttony on earth At the Tiger next door to Keats s in the market place Mr Josiah Topham Curtenty had put down his glass the port was kept specially for him and told his boon companion Mr Gordon that he must be going These two men had one powerful sentiment in common they loved the same woman Mr Curtenty aged twenty six in heart thirty six in mind and forty six in looks was fifty six only in years He was a rich man he had made money as an earthenware manufacturer in the good old times before Satan was ingenious enough to invent German competition American tariffs and the price of coal he was still making money with the aid of his son Harry who now managed the works but he never admitted that he was making it No one has yet succeeded and no one ever will succeed in catching an earthenware manufacturer in the act of making money he may confess with a sigh that he has performed the feat in the past he may give utterance to a vague preposterous hope that he will perform it again in the remote future but as for surprising him in the very act you would as easily surprise a hen laying an egg Nowadays Mr Curtenty commercially secure spent most of his energy in helping to shape and control the high destinies of the town He was Deputy Mayor and Chairman of the General Purposes Committee of the Town Council he was also a Guardian of the Poor a Justice of the Peace President of the Society for the Prosecution of Felons a sidesman an Oddfellow and several other things that meant dining shrewdness and good nature He was a short stiff stout red faced man jolly with the jollity that springs from a kind heart a humorous disposition a perfect digestion and the respectful deference of one s bank manager Without being a member of the Browning Society he held firmly to the belief that all s right with the world Mr Gordon who has but a sorry part in the drama was a younger quieter less forceful person rather shy a municipal mediocrity perhaps a little inflated that day by reason of his having been elected to the Chairmanship of the Gas and Lighting Committee Both men had sat on their committees at the Town Hall across the way that deceitful afternoon and we see them now after refreshment well earned and consumed about to separate and sink into private life But as they came out into the portico of the Tiger the famous Calypso like barmaid of the Tiger a hovering enchantment in the background it occurred that a flock of geese were meditating as geese will in the middle of the road The gooseherd a shabby middle aged man looked as though he had recently lost the Battle of Marathon and was asking himself whether the path of his retreat might not lie through the bar parlour of the Tiger Business pretty good Mr Curtenty inquired of him cheerfully In the Five Towns business takes the place of weather as a topic of salutation Business echoed the gooseherd In that one unassisted noun scorning the aid of verb adjective or adverb the gooseherd by a masterpiece of profound and subtle emphasis contrived to express the fact that he existed in a world of dead illusions that he had become a convert to Schopenhauer and that Mr Curtenty s inapposite geniality was a final grievance to him There ain t no business he added Ah returned Mr Curtenty thoughtful such an assertion of the entire absence of business was a reflection upon the town
