Shivanna,Rajesh Tandon,2014-09-01 Successful reproduction is the basis not only for the stability of the species in their natural habitat but also for productivity of our crop plants Therefore knowledge on reproductive ecology of wild and cultivated plants is important for effective management of our dwindling biodiversity and for the sustainability and improvement of the yield in crop species Conservation and management of our plant diversity is going to be a major challenge in the coming decades particularly in the tropical countries which are rich in biodiversity Reproductive failure is the main driver for pushing a large number of tropical species to vulnerable category Available data on reproductive ecology on tropical species is very limited and there is an urgent need to initiate research on these lines A major limitation for the beginners to take up research is the absence of simple concise work manuals that provide step wise procedures to study all aspects of reproductive ecology The Manual fills this void Over 60 protocols described in the manual cover the whole spectrum of reproductive ecology study sites and species phenology floral morphology and sexuality pollen and pistil biology pollination ecology breeding system seed biology seed dispersal and seedling recruitment Each chapter gives a concise conceptual account of the topic before describing the protocols The Manual caters to researchers teachers and students who are interested in any aspect of reproductive ecology of flowering plants botanists ecologists agri horticulturists foresters entomologists plant breeders and conservation biologists strict regulations are imposed to limit the potential contaminants in foods Development of accurate rapid and inexpensive approaches to test food contamination and adulteration would be highly valued to ensure global food safety There are existing processes to ensure safety of food products from chemical and microbial contaminants Apart from the existing measurement technologies varieties of new techniques are also being emerged and these could be potential to ensure food safety and quality In addition to chemical and microbial properties sensory properties such as texture mouth feel flavor and taste are among the most important attributes of food products to ensure their acceptability by consumers Two approaches are available to evaluate sensory properties of food products namely subjective and objective analyses The responses are perceived by all five senses smell taste sight touch and hearing The approach used in sensory evaluation varies depending on the types of foods and the ultimate goal of the testing Sensory attributes are the most important quality parameters after ensuring the safety of foods

Urban Transport XX C. A. Brebbia,2014-05-28 Urban Transport XX contains the proceedings of the 20th International Conference on Urban Transport and the Environment Transportation in urban areas with its related environmental and social impacts is a topic of significant concern for policymakers in both municipal and central government and for the urban citizens who need effective and efficient transport systems Urban transport systems require considerable studies to devise and then safeguard their operational use maintenance and operational safety Transportation systems produce significant environmental impacts and can enhance or degrade the quality of life in urban centres Clearly the challenge of providing effective and efficient transport systems in urban settings remains an acute challenge with financial political and environmental constrains limiting the ability of transport system planners and operators to deliver the high quality outcomes expected by the public Topics covered include Transport Strategies Public Transport Systems Environmentally Friendly Transport Modes Pedestrians and Traffic Environmental Impact Intelligent Transport Systems Transport Safety and Security Infrastructure Experiences from Emerging Countries Land use and Transport Integration

Fernandez,2022-02-24 The Art of Status Jelena Subotic,Professor of Political Science Jelena Subotic,2025-10-09 An illuminating exploration of the relationship between the restitution of looted art global status and the international construction of national cultural heritage Why is art restitution a matter of politics How does the artwork displayed in national museums reflect the international status of the state that owns it Why do some states agree to return looted art and others resist National art collections have long been a way for states to compete with each other for status prestige and cultural worth in international society In many former imperial nations however these collections include art looted during imperial expansions and colonial occupations While this was once a sign of high international standing the markers of such status particularly in the context of art have since significantly changed A new international legal and normative architecture governing art provenance developed after World War II and became institutionalized in the 1990s and 2000s. Since then there have been national and global social movements demanding the return of looted art. This shift has established not only that looting is wrong but more importantly that restitution is morally right. As a result of this reframing of what it means to own art, an artifact's historical provenance has become a core element of its value, and the search for provenance and demands for restitution a direct threat to state status. The same objects that granted states high international status now threaten to provoke status decline. In The Art of Status, Jelena Subotic examines this relationship between the restitution of looted art and international status with a focus on the Parthenon Elgin Marbles, the Benin Bronzes, and a collection of paintings looted during the Holocaust that are now housed at the Serbian National Museum. Subotic tells the story of these artworks, how they were looted, how they ended up on display in national museums, and how the art restitution disputes have unfolded. While these cases are different in terms of their historical context of looting and ownership claims, the movements for their restitution and resistance to it illustrate the larger questions of how national cultural heritage is internationally constructed and how it serves states' desire for international status and prestige. An in-depth and nuanced account of art restitution disputes, The Art of Status illuminates the shifting political significance of art on the international stage from ownership to restitution.

Taste and Healthy Eating in the Context of Well-being, Sustainability and 21st Century Food Science Hisayuki Uneyama, Ken Iwatsuki, Nobuyuki Sakai, Keiko Yasumatsu, 2025-04-24. In the Anthropocene, the global food system affects the geosystem and its biosphere, and thus it is important for us to reconsider our eating styles and develop new and sustainable food systems. This is particularly crucial since we are facing the risk of morbidity and mortality resulting from unhealthy diets. In 2019, the EAT-Lancet Commission offered a new food standard that gratifies both health and environmental sustainability, calling it the planetary health diet. It is necessary for us to understand the sensory characteristics of the planetary health diet and how we humans select, consume, and develop foods and beverages to satisfy the standards of this new dietary approach. These understandings add more fuel to promote the achievements of Sustainable Development Goals and of the planetary health diet. This Research Topic aims to reveal the neural and biological mechanisms underlying the perception and selection of the planetary health diet. Currently, we have only little knowledge about taste and flavor perception, so we do not know what sensory characteristics of foods are liked. Also, we do not know the mechanisms involved in selecting certain foods. For example, we know that excessive salt intake induces hypertension and/or obesity, but often we do not select low salt foods even when suffering from high blood pressure. We also know that animal models (e.g., mice, rats) consume more of diets that impart a good taste for them. As humans, however, we do not always eat so much of foods that may taste good for us and may consume foods or beverages that are not so enjoyable for us. Thus, a multidisciplinary approach is needed to challenge these topics.

Rational Basis for Clinical Translation in Stroke Therapy Giuseppe Micieli, Diana Amantea, 2014-08-27 Stroke remains one of the major causes of death and long term disability worldwide Currently the only approved therapy for the acute treatment of this disease is thrombolysis a strategy that can only be applied to a small percentage of patients due to its narrow therapeutic window Unfortunately during the last years numerous promising drugs that showed neuroprotection in the experimental setting failed to translate into the clinic because of their toxicity or lack of efficacy Researchers in the field now face the crucial need to develop effective stroke therapies and successfully translate novel strategies into the clinical setting Rational Basis for Clinical Translation in Stroke Therapy presents the most recent promising preclinical approaches and the most updated clinical evidence for treating stroke patients By bringing together the experience of accomplished stroke researchers and clinicians the book is a useful tool for improving the treatment and management of stroke patients The book describes current approaches for the management of stroke patients including thrombolysis and mechanical recanalization procedures as well as other clinically relevant topics such as diagnosis imaging risk factors and prevention Also described are emerging interventions based on the use of stem cells botulinum toxin and antidepressants which complement emergency stroke treatment and conventional rehabilitation procedures Clinical approaches are integrated with the most promising therapeutic opportunities based on targeting the immune system hypothermia and postconditioning The book also covers issues related to the improvement of R D strategies in stroke therapeutics aimed at the implementation of preclinical approaches with stroke model guidelines and at the optimization of clinical trial design This volume is a reference for all those interested in the rational development of novel stroke therapeutics
