"I am unpersuaded by the view that the prime rules of scientific method should differ between 'hard science' and the social sciences. Science is science."

—Stephen Van Evera, Guide to Methods

Overview: This course is designed to introduce students to the concepts and mechanics of political science research. The process of scientific political research will be the starting point for the course, which will then proceed to an understanding of gathering and testing data using basic statistical methods.

The course begins with consideration of what makes political science a "science". What logic must we follow to engage in scientific consideration of political phenomenon? That is, how is research conducted, how is it designed, what is the process by which we engage in the study of political phenomenon?

The course moves on to consider approaches to quantitative research. The topics in this section are based on understanding the gathering of data and design of research tests. What are the fundamental concepts required to understand quantitative methods in political science? How are samples collected? What is the difference between a sample and population? How are tests designed to make the best use of the sample data?

The next section of the course focuses on statistical concepts in the quantitative research process. Included in this section is understanding the use of descriptive statistics, and nonparametric measures of statistical relationship. Students will become familiar with use of excel and SPSS for statistical analysis and with the proper methods of reporting research results using tables, charts, and graphs.

This course is primarily focused on quantitative methods of political analysis. Time permitting qualitative methods will also be discussed. Quantitative analysis requires the development of an understanding for use of statistics to analyze the relationship between variables. Using statistics does mean using mathematical formulas. However, none of the formulas for this course exceed what a person could reasonably be expected to have learned in a basic college algebra class.
