New Directions In Language Development And Disorders Michael Perkins, Sara Howard, 2012-12-06 Research into child language development is being conducted more extensively by more people and in more countries throughout the world than at any point in the past We now know more than we ever did before about the linguistic cognitive neurobio logical and social capacities that children bring to their language learning task as well as the ways in which these capacities interact with a whole range of factors present in the child s environment throughout the learning process not least the particular characteristics of the language or languages to which the child is exposed Far from inducing a sense of complacency this new knowledge seems instead to create an even stronger impetus to know more This is partly because of the new and unforeseen questions it raises and partly because of competition between different theories to provide the best explanation of the phenomenon and which in turn engender different methods of enquiry This volume addresses many of the key issues which are currently exercising the minds of child language researchers and which are likely to motivate research for some years to come The chapters included here all previously unpublished present a great deal of new data and address a range of theoretical issues from a variety of perspectives

Studies in Interactional Linguistics Margret Selting, Elizabeth Couper-Kuhlen, 2001-01-01 Current interactional linguistic research appears to be crystallizing around systematic themes which are all represented in this collection of papers In the first section where the relation between language and interaction is viewed from the perspective of language structure several articles deal with the potential of a single structure for both turn and sequence construction revealing a play off between planned and occasioned syntax with potentially far reaching consequences for language development Other articles deal with lexical expressions as resources for the conduct of interaction showing how they are heavily dependent on turn position and sequential context for their meaning potential In the second section with a view from the perspective of the interactional order a systematic focus of interest lies on three different conversational tasks projecting turn and turn unit completion starting up turns with non beginnings and self repairing The cross linguistic studies here all agree that common interactional tasks may well be carried out by quite different linguistic practices and that these practices are dependent to a certain extent on language features which are typologically distinct
