

Repairing your Porsche 928 Central Warning System (CWS) controller

Disclaimer:

This procedure is for a 1984 Porsche 928 S controller.

Overview:

Under the left foot pedal (dead pedal) of the Porsche 928 lives the Central Warning System (CWS) controller. This miracle of 1980's electronics takes the inputs from the sensors on you 928 and compares them to a reference or another input and then drives the instrument bulbs in the pod cluster that illuminate the warning indicators on the dash display.

The system is implemented in an aluminum enclosure ~ 3.5" x 5"x 2" that contains 2 connectors. Each one of the connectors is soldered to a circuit board inside the unit and the two circuit boards are connected together using three flexible printed circuits. One circuit board contains a DS748 8-bit microcontroller. This controller has an 8-bit CPU, 1K x 8 of EPROM memory that stores the code that runs the system and 27 I/O lines that provide the sensor data to the microcontroller. Over a period of time the solder joints on the circuit boards begin to corrode or crack and need to be "re-flowed" to re-establish a solid connection. Socketed parts need to be "reseated" in the socket every now and then to re-establish a good connection.

The unit that you see in this write-up did not function at all at first (there was no warning lights at all). Upon re-flowing the solder on the main connectors, flex circuits and cleaning pins – all the warning lights would come on but not go off when the car was started. Reseating the microcontroller was required to get the unit to function correctly.

Tools Needed:

- Straight blade screwdriver
- 5/16" nut driver, socket or wrench.
- Needle nose pliers
- X-acto knife – (BE CAREFUL)
- Soldering iron, 15 to 40 watt with a good tip.
- Resin core solder
- Damp sponge or cloth
- Alcohol or flux remover.
- Q-tips.
- Magnifying glass (10x), eye loupes (10x) or hand band magnifier
- A small pick is helpful in removing old flux buildup.
- A few sheets of paper.

Preparation:

Before undertaking this project get you soldering iron hot and make sure the tip is still in good shape and tin it as necessary. Get your sponge wet. Put some Alcohol in a small container with Q-tips close. If you are not familiar with soldering there are several websites that give basic instruction. If you have never done electrical soldering before I recommend you practice before doing this. <http://www.kingbass.com/soldering101.html> gives some good information and pictures of good joints.

Current flow diagrams for the CWS are on page 97-17 of the workshop manuals. I found that MY 1984 pinout was slightly different than the diagram.

Power is supplied on the black connector thru the solid RED wire. +12V should be available at this pin (YMMV) with the key OFF. If no voltage is present at the pin, then troubleshoot fuses and wiring harnesses before beginning this procedure.
