The Political Economy of Climate Finance Effectiveness in Developing Countries Mark Purdon, 2024-01-01

There is ample evidence that engaging developing countries on climate change mitigation would have significant positive impacts on global climate efforts There is much debate however on the most effective strategy for unlocking these low cost mitigation opportunities While the Clean Development Mechanism CDM emerged as the main climate finance instrument for engaging developing countries under the Kyoto Protocol the carbon market approach it embodied would largely be replaced by a new array of climate finance instruments based on climate funds In The Political Economy of Climate Finance Effectiveness in Developing Countries Mark Purdon shows that the effectiveness of climate finance instruments to reduce emissions under either strategy has depended on the interaction between prevailing ideas about how to develop a nation s economy as well as state interests in various economic sectors Based on multiple field visits over a decade in three countries the author demonstrates that climate finance instruments have been more effectively implemented when the state treats them as vehicles for addressing priority development issues Climate finance instruments were more consistently and effectively implemented in Uganda and Moldova than Tanzania despite differences in state capacity between countries This pattern held for the CDM as well as subsequent instruments largely based on climate funds such as Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation REDD and other national mitigation actions Contributing to broader debates on international climate cooperation Purdon s findings inform international efforts to support national climate plans and catalyze low carbon development by emphasizing the importance of domestic politics and the state

Understanding the Human Factor of the Energy Transition: Mechanisms Underlying Energy-Relevant Decisions and Behaviors Tobias Brosch, David Sander, Martin K.

Patel, 2016-06-27 An increasing number of countries are shifting toward sustainable energy economies emphasizing the use of renewable energy sources increases in energy efficiency and the abatement of greenhouse gas emissions The success of such an energy transition will depend not only on the development of new energy technologies but also on major changes in the patterns of individual energy related decisions and behaviors resulting in substantial reductions in energy demand Consequently the behavioral sciences can make important contributions to the energy transition by increasing our understanding of the multiple factors and mechanisms that underlie individual as well as group based decisions and behaviors in the energy domain and by creating a basis for systematic interventions that reduce energy usage Many different types of relevant behaviors and decisions need to be considered in this context including decisions to invest in energy efficient household equipment adjustments of energy critical habits related to heating eating or mode of transportation and participation in the political discourse related to questions of energy An integration of the expertise of the different disciplines of the behavioral sciences is thus needed to comprehensively investigate the impact of the different drivers and barriers that may determine energy related decisions and behaviors including economic factors such as price level social factors such as norms communication patterns and social learning processes and individual factors such as values attitudes beliefs heuristics affective biases and emotions The potential impact of these factors on the success of the energy transition is considerable for example a recent projection of the energy demand in Switzerland until 2050 has estimated the reduction potential related to psychological and sociological factors between 0% and 30% depending on which behavioral changes will be implemented in society Increased research efforts from the behavioral sciences are required to ensure that the full reduction potential can be achieved This Research Topic brings together contributions from different disciplines such as psychology affective science behavioral economics economics sociology consumer behavior business science sociology and political science that improve our understanding of the many factors underlying decision making and behavior in the energy domain and contribute to the development of targeted interventions that aim at reducing energy demand based on these factors

Governance, Commissioning and Public Health Linda Marks, 2014-07-23 Drawing on in depth case studies across England this book argues that governance and population health are inextricably linked Using original research it shows how these links can be illustrated at a local level through commissioning practice related to health and wellbeing Exploring the impact of governance on decision making Governance commissioning and public health analyses how principles such as social justice and governance arrangements including standards and targets influence local strategies and priorities for public health investment In developing public health governance as a critical concept the study demonstrates the complexity of the governance landscape for public health and the leadership qualities required to negotiate it This book is essential reading for students academics practitioners and policy makers with an interest in governance and decision making for public health

The Ethics of Public Health Paternalism T M Wilkinson, 2024-12-30 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International licence It is free to read on the Oxford Academic platform and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations The Ethics of Public Health Paternalism is about policies that try to stop people damaging their own health From the point of view of public health advocates if people did not smoke or drank less alcohol or kept off junk food and sugary liquids they would tend to be healthier Hence such tactics as taxing tobacco restricting the sale of alcohol and limiting the density of fast food outlets Because these tactics appear to limit freedom of choice they are often pejoratively described as the actions of a nanny state that overvalues health and wrongly infringes on the autonomy of adults But many of us want to be healthy rather than ill and alive rather than dead Does a state really nanny us when it uses its power to make us healthier If it does should it stop Some public health policies might reduce inequities of health or save costs in medical treatment or correct market failures But as this book shows lots would not The best case for many public health interventions is paternalistic aiming to steer people away from making unhealthy choices against their own interests But even though it is the best case it often fails It overvalues health and undervalues autonomy It exaggerates the influence of addiction and the marketing of unhealthy products Except for smoking we do not have the evidence needed to show that unhealthy choices are so mistaken as to justify the interventions Much of what modern public health does when it tries to stop adults damaging their health has not been justified The Ethics of Public Health Paternalism applies political and moral philosophy to the ideas of both supporters and critics of public health interventions It uses philosophical analysis of the values of health and well being to explain what sort of evidence is needed to support public health interventions thus exposing a major gap in the arguments of public health advocates and it engages in detail with empirical evidence for instance about smokers regrets

The Routledge Handbook of Transport Economics Jonathan Cowie, Stephen Ison, 2017-08-07 The Routledge Handbook of Transport Economics offers the first state of the art overview of the discipline of transport economics as it stands today reflective of key research and policy Transport is an important area of study and one which is problem rich stimulating a great deal of debate in areas which impact on everyday lives Much of this focuses on the practicalities of the modern day phenomenon of mass movement and all of the issues which surround it The discipline of economics is central to this debate and consequently the study and application of transport economics has a chief role to play in seeking to address subjects relating to major transport issues It can be argued that at the very heart of any transport issue or problem lies the underlying economics of the situation understand that and you alleviate the problem Featuring contributions from world leading scholars and practitioners from across the globe all of the chapters within this book are written from a practical perspective theory is applied and developed using real world examples The book examines concepts issues ideas and practicalities of transport provision in five key topic areas public transport public transport reform economic development and transport modelling transport and the environment freight transport A real strength of the book is in linking theory to practice and hence the economics that are examined in this text are not the economics of the abstract but rather the economics of everyday living Practical and insightful this volume is an essential reference for any student or researcher working in all areas of transport provision ranging from planning appraisal regulation and freight and for all practitioners looking to develop their professional knowledge and who are seeking professional accreditation EU
