1. Scientific method: Is an organized set of investigation procedures.
2. Independent variable: Is changed to determine how it will affect the dependent variable (what we are changing in the experiment).
3. Dependent variable: Is a variable that changes value as other variables change (what we are measuring in the experiment).

5. Hypothesis: Is an educated guess based on knowledge and observation.
6. Constant: Is a variable that does not change when other variables change.

Application:

Marcie is trying a new cookie recipe. She wants to see if the amount of baking powder she uses will make the cookies rise more. She makes three batches of cookies and changes the amount of baking powder for each batch.

7. What is the independent variable? The amount of baking powder that she uses.
8. What is the dependent variable? How high the cookies rise.
9. What are 2 things that must remain constant for this experiment? Temperature of oven, other ingredients that are added must be the same.
10. Write a testable question for this experiment. What does the effect of the amount of baking powder have on how high cookies will rise when baked?
11. Write a hypothesis for this experiment. If more baking powder is added to the recipe, then the cookies will rise higher because baking powder is used to help cookies rise.
