Document 2: Informational Passage

In the early 1500s, Copernicus served in a variety of roles for the Catholic Church, where he developed economic theories and legislation. Astronomy became the more than a hobby for Copernicus, a career without professional title. By 1514, however, Copernicus became so knowledgeable in the theory of a heliocentric (sun-centered) solar system that he began to share his notes with friends. Not long after an Italian astronomer gave a lecture about the sun being the center of the universe, Copernicus decided he was ready to publish an official book about 1543. The book was finally published. The book was revolutionary and caused a stir in the Catholic Church. In the book, Copernicus explained that if Copernicus's heliocentric theory was correct, the positions of the planets would change over time. He also argued that the distance to the sun is much less than the distance from the sun to the stars. Copernicus died a year later in 1543.

Document 3: Cartoon titled "Galileo describes his discovery to the Church" by Chris Madden

Background Information: The Catholic Church supported Aristotle's theory that the moon and stars were made of pure and perfect substances. He also said they were perfect spheres.

Why do you think the Church supported this claim?

Take a close look at the cartoon. How do Galileo's image of the moon differ from the Church's view?

Why do you think the Pope is hitting Galileo over the head with his telescope?
