The novels Robinson Crusoe of Daniel Defoe and Gulliver's Travels by Jonathan Swift had become popular fictional sources

It illustrates the ideas and tenets of colonialism/ imperialism, specifically British colonialism, in the eighteenth century. Robinson Crusoe typifies the British colonialist who embodies the typical ideas of sea adventure for the purpose of economic gain through exercising European superiority over the natives who they believed to be savages and uncivilized. Gulliver's Travels, on the other hand, opposes the ideas of colonialism, arguing that some people being colonized are not really savages but people who have their own respectable, simple culture and the author exposes the selfish ambitious motives and human wickedness acts that hide beneath the cloak of pretending to make other groups civilized. The words "colonialism" and "imperialism" are two words that carry the meaning of overseas expansion. In the book Colonialism : A Theoretical Overview, colonialism is defined as a relationship that exists between two groups of people belonging to different cultures in which the alien minority ( "colonizers" ), who are not willing to adapt to the local culture, are the ones who are making important decisions concerning the life of the "colonized" majority. These decisions are largely based on the economic, political or ideological interest of the alien minority (Leonard 355). The word colonize comes from the Latin word colere which means "to cultivate, to till the soil and to inhabit "(Calder 160). Historically, colonialism began in the late fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries during the rapid European overseas expansion and ends during the anti -colonialism campaign after the Second World War. Imperialism, on the other hand, describes an activity of a later date (around the middle of the nineteenth century) when new ideas and concepts were incorporated to colonialism, especially with respect to capitalism. Other historians, however, ascribe a wider and all inclusive meaning to imperialism, describing it as "any efforts and activities aiming at the creation and maintenance of a transcolonial empire" or in other words, it means "all collective efforts producing colonialism" (Leonard 355). The story of Robinson Crusoe is written by Daniel Defoe. Robinson Crusoe as a young man had dreamt of going on sea voyages. However, his father wants him to become a lawyer and encourage him to choose a life that is of middle-class status. Since his parents did not allow him to embark on a sea journey, Crusoe ran away and went to London with his friend. Afterwards Crusoe sails towards Guiana but the ship is attacked by Turkish pirates and he was brought into the Moorish port of Saltee where he became a slave. After two years, Crusoe escapes with a Moorish youth named Xury and sailed to an uninhabited island. Later, they spotted a Portuguese ship that took them to Brazil where Crusoe sells Xury to the captain. In Brazil, Crusoe flourishes in a plantation business but later is persuaded to join a slave trade and upon sailing he and the crew are shipwrecked. Crusoe is the only one who survived. Crusoe then swims to an uninhabited island where he manages to make his life comfortable using...
