The Skeletal System Reading and Comprehension

Directions: Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

The human skeletal system is an incredible framework of bones that supports and shapes our body. It is made up of 206 bones in adults, though babies are born with about 270 bones that fuse as they grow. The skeletal system has many important jobs, such as protecting vital organs, enabling movement, and storing essential minerals like calcium.

Bones come in different shapes and sizes, depending on their purpose. For example, the skull is made up of flat bones that protect the brain, while long bones in the arms and legs help us move. The ribcage is a set of curved bones that protect the heart and lungs. Joints connect bones to each other, and some, like the elbow and knee, allow movement, while others, like the skull, do not move at all.

The skeletal system works closely with muscles to help us move. When a muscle contracts, it pulls on a bone to create movement. This cooperation between bones and muscles is why it's called the musculoskeletal system. Bones are also alive! They have cells that help them grow, repair, and stay strong. Eating calcium-rich foods like milk and leafy greens, along with getting plenty of exercise, keeps our skeletal system healthy.

1. How many bones does an adult human have?

2. Why do babies have more bones than adults?
