

An artistic illustration of two European Waxwings (Bombycilla garrulus) perched on a gnarled tree branch. The birds are shown in profile, facing right. They have a distinctive reddish-brown crest, a black mask around the eyes, and a black throat. Their plumage is primarily a warm, peachy-brown color. The wings and tail show more detail, with black, white, and yellow markings. Several clusters of bright red berries are attached to the branch, some above and some below the birds. The background is plain white.
