Re-writing Pasts, Imagining Futures Gomia, Victor N., Ndi, Gilbert Shang, 2018-02-20 The papers in this volume focus on fiction and theatre in their traditional forms as well as in their encounters with novel and innovative forms and avenues of dissemination As a cultural practice that emerged from a process of protest and contestation of hegemony it is understandable that one main concern in African literature and literary criticism is the resistance against the emergence of marginalizing centers in formerly or currently marginalized societies with regard to discourses aesthetics and media of creation These new centers that sometimes undermine the strategic tactical exploitation of the relative advantage procured by each medium run the risk of leading to new forms of stratification that mitigate the import of African and African diasporic literatures The collection of essays therefore seeks to analyze the representation of pertinent socio political and historical questions in a variety of postcolonial texts from Africa and the African diasporas notably the Caribbean islands and the United States of America However far from re writing of history in a way that cedes to conservative worldviews creative writers and critics simultaneously attempt to chart ways forward for socially all inclusive futures In the context of colonial and neo colonial legacies that seem to forestall any sense of individual and collective self fulfillment contributors to this volume examine the pertinence of African fiction and theatre in imagining new vistas of re conceptualizing the postcolonial condition in ways that re galvanize the belief in an enabling future

Defending Hope Justin Langford,2013-02-01 Most of the current scholarly literature on biblical intertextuality or the use of the Old Testament in the New Testament exhibits a high degree of variance regarding methodological approach The variety of methods employed naturally yields a variety of results Semiotics or the study of signs and how they communicate offers an avenue for approaching intertextual references that focuses on communication theory and meaning In addition semiotic theory provides an overarching methodological framework for examining intertextual references As such a semiotic approach can assist in creating greater methodological consistency and clarity for this nuanced area of New Testament study The purpose of this book is to explore the use of semiotics as a viable approach to biblical intertextuality The intertextual references to Isaiah in 1 Peter will serve as the test case for an application of the method A semiotic approach is promising because it offers a solution to the pervasive problem of methodology in intertextual studies Moreover the investigation of 1 Peter s use of Isaiah provides a fresh perspective on how Peter utilizes this important source in the construction of his epistle and the communication of his message

Head Masters Stephen Tomlinson,2005-02-13 Contributes to a better understanding of Horace Mann and the educational reform movement he advanced Head Masters challenges the assumption that phrenology the study of the conformation of the skull as it relates to mental faculties and character played only a minor and somewhat anecdotal role in the development of education Stephen Tomlinson asserts instead that phrenology was a scientifically respectable theory of human nature perhaps the first solid physiological psychology He shows that the first phrenologists were among the most prominent scientists and intellectuals of their day and that the concept was eagerly embraced by leading members of the New England medical community Following its progression from European theorists Franz Joseph Gall Johan Gasper Spurzheim and George Combe to Americans Horace Mann and Samuel Gridley Howe Tomlinson traces the origins of phrenological theory and examines how its basic principles of human classification inheritance and development provided a foundation for the progressive practices advocated by middle class reformers such as Combe and Mann He also elucidates the ways in which class race and gender stereotypes permeated 19th century thought and how popular views of nature mind and society supported a secular curriculum favoring the use of disciplinary practices based on physiology This study ultimately offers a reconsideration of the ideas and theories that motivated education reformers such as Mann and Howe and a reassessment of Combe who though hardly known by contemporary scholars emerges as one of the most important and influential educators of the 19th century
