

EXPLORATORY ESSAY SAMPLE

In the modern conditions of scientific, technological, economic and overall social development, an environment in which different organizations, including universities, as well as entire economies and societies function more and more complex and dynamic, with the constant growth of pressure of innovative competitors oriented to the regional or global market.

Based on the foregoing in the future, it can be expected that the functioning of the university will be based on different principles, which will place new requirements in front of management, teachers, associates, researchers, administrative staff and students in order to provide a common response to these processes. In this context, the personal and organizational innovative capacities of the university will have the imperative to introduce an entrepreneurially oriented way of thinking and behavior of university employees by demonstrating a wider range of personal entrepreneurial skills, actively participating in entrepreneurial learning processes, demonstrating a high level of emotional intelligence, generating individual and group entrepreneurial activities, and ensuring quality communication with stakeholders.

In this sense, third-generation universities should focus on building partner networks through the activity of building co-operability, where two seemingly contradictory activities, i.e. concepts, are combined, that is, co-operation and competitiveness, i.e. competition. In the above sense, a systemic requirement for the establishment of mechanisms for the preparation and realization of current challenges, working with new partners, new pedagogical paradigm, development of new skills of students, improvement of efforts related to their own learning, entrepreneurial ways of thinking and behavior, new tools and ideas, business start-up innovation, mobility, cross-culturalism and productivity.

Advanced Design in Nursing Research Pamela J. Brink,Marilynn J. Wood,1997-12-02 Is there a framework to help the nursing researcher make sense of the wide variety of research methods now available Is there a context in which the research designer can consider which method is most appropriate to her or his specific study given the research topic and the extent of research that has gone before The answer to both of these questions is an emphatic yes as seen in this second edition of Pamela J Brink and Marilyn J Wood's seminal work Advanced Design in Nursing Research Using the principle that the level of knowledge available on a research topic determines the level of design that can be used to study that topic the authors clearly and succinctly present discussions of research at the three levels of design moving from rigidly controlled theoretically based experimental designs to comparative and correlational survey designs and concluding with the exploratory descriptive research designs that frequently initiate the study of a topic Within the basic categories authoritative researchers explore a broad range of specific design types noting their characteristics strengths and weaknesses applicability to nursing research ethical considerations reliability and validity and methods of data analysis Advanced Design in Nursing Research Second Edition provides not only a context for design decision making but an orientation and point of departure for the research design process itself These features make this volume an excellent text for advanced level nursing students and a superb library addition for the researcher or clinician desiring a comprehensive self reference on research design
