Prompt: Using a favorite quotation from an essay or book you have read in the last three years as a starting point, tell us about an event or experience that helped you define one of your values or changed how you approach the world. Please write the quotation, title and author at the beginning of your essay.

In the Serenity Prayer by Reinhold Niebuhr, the author is quoted as saying "God, grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference". I didn't know the meaning of those lines until I came upon a challenging point in my life in which I was forced to choose between accepting the result of a decision, or continue to fight a battle that I did not have much hope of winning. I am writing this princeton admissions essay to further explain my circumstances and how they helped me to develop into a better individual.

When my parents decided to separate when I was eight years old, I decided I would try whatever I could to bring them back together. To me, I believed that they were better off together, and I would constantly try to create scenarios in which they would be forced to spend long periods of time together. Instead of making the situation better, I ended up catalyzing more fights and arguments between the two. This continued for five more years until one day I realized that my parents were only human, and that it was not up to me to decide the path of their lives.

Of course, I wanted to have they type of happy two-parent family that was often shown on sitcoms and advertisements. However, I learned that sometimes accepting someone else's decision, regardless of how much you may dislike it, is the best way for everyone to move forward. I learned to accept the decision of my parents that I could not change, and it has allowed me to develop a better relationship with both of my parents, as well as understand myself better.
