Insurance, Biases, Discrimination and Fairness Arthur Charpentier, 2024-05-13 This book offers an introduction to the technical foundations of discrimination and equity issues in insurance models catering to undergraduates postgraduates and practitioners It is a self contained resource accessible to those with a basic understanding of probability and statistics Designed as both a reference guide and a means to develop fairer models the book acknowledges the complexity and ambiguity surrounding the question of discrimination in insurance In insurance proposing differentiated premiums that accurately reflect policyholders true risk termed actuarial fairness or legitimate discrimination is economically and ethically motivated However such segmentation can appear discriminatory from a legal perspective By intertwining real life examples with academic models the book incorporates diverse perspectives from philosophy social sciences economics mathematics and computer science Although discrimination has long been a subject of inquiry in economics and philosophy it has gained renewed prominence in the context of big data with an abundance of proxy variables capturing sensitive attributes and artificial intelligence or specifically machine learning techniques which often involve less interpretable black box algorithms The book distinguishes between models and data to enhance our comprehension of why a model may appear unfair It reminds us that while a model may not be inherently good or bad it is never neutral and often represents a formalization of a world seen through potentially biased data Furthermore the book equips actuaries with technical tools to quantify and mitigate potential discrimination featuring dedicated chapters that delve into these methods

Agendas for 21st Century Engineers David Prescott, 2014-10-02 This book is for engineers of different disciplines such as chemical electrical petroleum mechanical and civil engineering and will appeal both to the experienced professional engineer and to undergraduate or postgraduate engineering students This singular volume presents selected articles on themes that arise at the interface between engineering and the different societies in which it is practised Themes of current interest include ethics gender balance education workplace preparation communication competencies and the future of engineering Original and thought provoking articles on these themes are presented by authors who have achieved international recognition for their work in engineering research practice and education and who work in different capacities in industry or higher education around the world Recognizing the pluralism that is characteristic of such themes each chapter presents two articles reflecting distinct perspectives and contexts This volume therefore provides ideal opportunities for readers who wish to develop their critical thinking capacities by contrasting and evaluating the different viewpoints It also provides readers with writing that complements the technical discourse predominant in engineering workplaces and institutes This book therefore while promoting professional literacy and thinking skills development concurrently serves to cultivate the well rounded and forward looking engineers required by the international community to meet the multifaceted challenges of 21st century engineering Resources in Education ,1998 Cell-Free Synthetic Biology Jian Li,Yong-Chan Kwon,Yuan
