

This process proved to be very effective this is because some of the assumptions that were made in the preliminary discussions through this process were proven wrong. For instance, the profits in the preliminary discussions were overstated but through this process, some expenses that had not been put into consideration were discovered which lowered the stated profits. This process was also very effective in determination of the alternative course of action where some of the activities that we sought to conduct in the future through this process we were able to determine that the best alternative would be to outsource them, for instance, the storage of data and software development.

Essays In Decision Making Mark Mark, Jaap Spronk, Jyrki Wallenius, 2012-12-06 The pioneering study by Bowman 1980 reawakened interest in risk and return relations in the strategic management literature We do not examine this literature here because we have elsewhere reviewed it in detail 1 and because for the most part these studies have been confined to ex post data Discussions of the strategies which subjects used to direct their ex ante evaluations of risks and returns have either been omitted or else have been only indirectly inferred from ex post data In addition with few exceptions this literature does not attempt to ascertain the meanings that might have been assigned by subjects to terms like risk and or the returns with which they have been concerned Even fewer of these studies have attempted to ascertain how the subjects implemented their definitions en of prospective strategies Thus this literature may route to arriving at evaluations best be regarded as bearing only indirect relations to the present study which is concerned not only with the meanings assigned to terms like risk and return but also with how these terms are used in arriving at risk and return evaluations of proposed strategies as well as how they are measured and used on an ex ante basis en route to seeing how these evaluations match with ex post performance In a sense one part of this study i e

Multiple-Criteria Decision-Making (MCDM) Techniques for Business Processes Information Management

Edmundas Kazimieras Zavadskas, Jurgita Antuchevičienė, Prasenjit Chatterjee, 2019-03-08 Information management is a common paradigm in modern decision making. A wide range of decision making techniques have been proposed in the literature to model complex business and engineering processes. In this Special Issue 16 selected and peer reviewed original research articles contribute to business information management in various current real world problems by proposing crisp or uncertain multiple criteria decision making MCDM models and techniques mostly including multi attribute decision making MADM approaches in addition to a single paper proposing an interactive multi objective decision making MODM approach. Particular attention is devoted to information aggregation operators. 65% of papers dealt with this item. The topics of this Special Issue gained attention in Europe and Asia. A total of 48 authors from seven countries contributed to this Issue. The papers are mainly concentrated in three application areas: supplier selection and rational order allocation, the evaluation and selection of goods or facilities and personnel selection, partner selection. A number of new approaches are proposed that are expected to attract great interest from the research community. Decision Making and Problem Solving in Organizations: Assessing and Expanding the Carnegie Perspective Daniella Laureiro Martinez, Pino Audia, Daniel A. Newark, 2024-09-04 Within the broader study of decision making the Carnegie perspective occupies a unique place. Initially developed by pioneering scholars such as Herbert Simon and James March it views organizational decisions as resulting from the combined influences of a psychological processes of attention allocation, interpretation of experience and motivated search and b features of the organizational context that direct attention influence preferences contend with ambiguity contain conflict and divide labor. Despite its unique strengths and a considerable body of work see below some foundational references research that adopts the Carnegie perspective is still relatively unknown outside the field of organization studies. As James March noted Carnegie has been primarily an importer of ideas rather than an exporter. The goal of this research topic is to facilitate dialogue and integration between this well established Carnegie perspective and other lines of inquiry into the study of decision making and problem solving. We are interested in bringing to the fore what is distinctive in the accumulated body of evidence produced by the Carnegie perspective and highlighting similarities differences and potential points of connection with other research done on similar topics. To achieve this goal we hope that the front end of each submission will cover the following four components. Decision-Making in Midwifery Practice Maureen D. Raynor, Jayne E. Decision Making Under Uncertainty Andrzej Ruszczynski, 2002-06-07 In the ideal world major decisions would be made based on complete and reliable information available to the decision maker We live in a world of uncertainties and decisions must be made from information which may be incomplete and may contain uncertainty The key mathematical question addressed in this volume is how to make decision in the presence of quantifiable uncertainty The volume contains articles on model problems of decision making process in the energy and power industry when the available information is noisy and or incomplete The major tools used in studying these problems are mathematical modeling and optimization techniques especially stochastic optimization These articles are meant to provide an insight into this rapidly developing field which lies in the intersection of applied statistics probability operations research and economic theory It is hoped that the present volume will provide entry to newcomers into the field and stimulation for further research

Dynamics of decision making: from evidence to preference and belief Erica Yu, David A. Lagnado, 2014-10-24 At the core of the many debates throughout cognitive science concerning how decisions are made are the processes governing the time course of preference formation and decision From perceptual choices such as whether the signal on a radar screen indicates an enemy missile or a spot on a CT scan indicates a tumor to cognitive value based decisions such as selecting an agreeable flatmate or deciding the guilt of a defendant significant and everyday decisions are dynamic over time Phenomena such as decoy effects preference reversals and order effects are still puzzling researchers For example in a legal context jurors receive discrete pieces of evidence in sequence and must integrate these pieces together to reach a singular verdict From a standard Bayesian viewpoint the order in which people receive the evidence should not influence their final decision and yet order effects seem a robust empirical phenomena in many decision contexts Current research on how decisions unfold especially in a dynamic environment is advancing our theoretical understanding of decision making This Research Topic aims to review and further explore the time course of a decision from how prior beliefs are formed to how those beliefs are used and updated over time towards the formation of preferences and choices and post decision processes and effects Research literatures encompassing varied approaches to the time scale of decisions will be brought into scope a Speeded decisions and post decision processes that require the accumulation of noisy and possibly non stationary perceptual evidence e g randomly moving dots stimuli within a few seconds with or without temporal uncertainty b Temporally extended value based decisions that integrate feedback values e g gambling machines and internally generated decision criteria e g when one switches attention selectively between the various aspects of several choice alternatives c Temporally extended belief based decisions that build on the integration of evidence which interacts with the decision maker s belief system towards the updating of the beliefs and the formation of judgments and preferences as in the legal context Research that emphasizes theoretical concerns including optimality analysis and mechanisms underlying the decision process both neural and cognitive is presented as well as research that combines experimental and computational levels of analysis

Matteo Cristofaro, Yongjian Bao, Sana Chiu, Ana Beatriz Hernández-Lara, Leticia Perez-Calero, 2023-02-15     Encyclopedia of Decision Making and Decision Support Technologies Adam, Frederic, Humphreys, Patrick, 2008-04-30 As effective organizational decision making is a major factor in a company's success a comprehensive account of current available research on the core concepts of the decision support agenda is in high demand by academicians and professionals Through 110 authoritative contributions by over 160 of the world's leading experts the Encyclopedia of Decision Making and Decision Support Technologies presents a critical mass of research on the most up to date research on human and computer support of managerial decision making including discussion on support of operational tactical and strategic decisions human vs computer system support structure individual and group decision making and multi criteria decision making     Decision-making, 1968     Decision Making under Uncertainty in Financial Markets Jonas Ekblom, 2018-09-13 This thesis addresses the topic of decision making under uncertainty with particular focus on financial markets The aim of this research is to support improved decisions in practice and related to this to advance our understanding of financial markets Stochastic optimization provides the tools to determine optimal decisions in uncertain environments and the optimality conditions of these models produce insights into how financial markets work To be more concrete a great deal of financial theory is based on optimality conditions derived from stochastic optimization models Therefore an important part of the development of financial theory is to study stochastic optimization models that step by step better capture the essence of reality This is the motivation behind the focus of this thesis which is to study methods that in relation to prevailing models that underlie financial theory allow additional real world complexities to be properly modeled The overall purpose of this thesis is to develop and evaluate stochastic optimization models that support improved decisions under uncertainty on financial markets The research into stochastic optimization in financial literature has traditionally focused on problem formulations that allow closed form or exact numerical solutions typically through the application of dynamic programming or optimal control The focus in this thesis is on two other optimization methods namely stochastic programming and approximate dynamic programming which open up opportunities to study new classes of financial problems More specifically these optimization methods allow additional and important aspects of many real world problems to be captured This thesis contributes with several insights that are relevant for both financial and stochastic optimization literature First we show that the modeling of several real world aspects traditionally not considered in the literature are important components in a model which supports corporate hedging decisions Specifically we document the importance of modeling term premia a rich asset universe and transaction costs Secondly we provide two methodological contributions to the stochastic programming literature by i highlighting the challenges of realizing improved decisions through more stages in stochastic programming models and ii developing an importance sampling method that can be used to produce high solution quality with few scenarios Finally we design an approximate dynamic programming model that gives close to optimal solutions to the classic and thus far unsolved portfolio choice problem with constant relative risk aversion preferences and transaction costs given many risky assets and a large number of time periods

Decision Making under Uncertainty Kerstin Preuschoff, Peter N. C. Mohr, Ming Hsu, 2015-06-16 Most decisions in life are based on incomplete information and have uncertain consequences To successfully cope with real life situations the nervous system has to estimate represent and eventually resolve uncertainty at various levels A common tradeoff in such decisions involves those between the magnitude of the expected rewards and the uncertainty of obtaining the rewards For instance a decision maker may choose to forgo the high expected rewards of investing in the stock market and settle instead for the lower expected reward and much less uncertainty of a savings account Little is known about how different forms of uncertainty such as risk or ambiguity are processed and learned about and how they are integrated with expected rewards and individual preferences throughout the decision making process With this Research Topic we aim to provide a deeper and more detailed understanding of the processes behind decision making under uncertainty
