In the late 1960s I worked as a graduate teaching assistant in plant ecology for the late Dr John Henry Davis at the University of Florida On one of our visits to the Everglades he mentioned to me that he had been studying problems of the Everglades since the early 1930s and that rapid growth in Florida unless checked was about to doom the Everglades He hoped his vegetation survey of the Everglades and his vegetation map could someday be used to help restore the Everglades to some semblance of what it had been prior to the turn of the century These long forgotten discussions with Dr Davis were rekindled when during a wetland conference in Orlando Florida in the late 1980s I was asked what might be responsible for the reported massive invasion of cattails that had been noted during the past decade in the Everglades Several hypotheses were presented at the meeting including some preliminary data on the significant inputs of nutrients from agricultural lands and Lake Okeechobee to the north The shifts in the hydrologic conditions and flow patterns of the existing Everglades were also mentioned Because of the extensive work on phosphorus and nutrient retention then being done at the Duke University Wetland Center I was asked in early 1989 to do a preliminary survey and analysis of the ecological status of the Everglades
