Paradise Lost and the Rise of the Novel Branko Marijanović,2022-08-17 This book claims that Paradise Lost contains all the traits of the great epics as well as the predominant characteristics of early modern novels and that every history of the novel should acknowledge Milton's unintentional contribution to the development of the genre Milton's Satan is presented as a novelistic character par excellence preceding memorable literary characters of novelistic provenance like Dostoyevsky's Raskolnikov Shelley's monster or Kafka's beetle In addition this book proves that all the elements of modernity like capitalism science all pervasive doubt the absence of unquestionable ideals radical individualism and the insatiable desire for self realization and incessant advancement are inherent to both Paradise Lost and Satan's character Just like a fully developed novelistic character and unlike any epic character in history Satan constantly surprises us by failing exceeding or simply contradicting our expectations As such the book demonstrates that Satan shares more common points with the likes of Tom Jones Moll Flanders or Lovelace than with the traditional epic heroes like Achilles or Aeneas proving that the novel as a genre owes an immense debt to Milton's grand epic and that Satan may be perceived as a precursor of the great novelistic characters

A Novel* Emma C. C. Steinman, 1875 Second Son: A Novel of the Deep South Herman Willis Logan, Kathleen Parrish, 2024-07-25 Second Son chronicles a poor southern boy s journey to manhood during the final years of the Great Depression and the epic panorama of World War II Towanna Whitaker longs to get his education and be somebody anything to escape the grinding poverty and desolation of the Mississippi cotton fields But when his mother abandons the family he s forced to give up school to care for little Karen the baby sister she leaves behind Embracing a homemaker s duties leaves him open to the scorn and ridicule of other boys and the unwanted attention of an old pedophile protected by his status as a hero in the First World War Towanna evades the old man s attention and endures the ridicule of the townspeople for taking a woman's place because he has no choice. All his love is poured into caring for his family and little Karen while his pa and brother struggle to bring in a massive cotton crop. His joy dares to grow when a neighbor's baby born out of wedlock is also given into his care. That joy is destroyed when little Karen is killed in a freak accident one he might have prevented. Only the unrelenting love of Julie May the mulatto midwife who delivered both babies and the steadfast affections of Kathy a neighbor's girl keep him struggling to find some meaning in life. Towanna slowly climbs out of the pit of despair and self-hatred he'd tried to bury himself in and tentatively reaches for the love Kathy offers. He begins to live again. His one fear is that those he loves will somehow abandon him like his ma who left her family for her dream of a better life in New Orleans or Karen whose death almost destroyed him. He finally dares to return Kathy's love when World War II threatens to tear them apart. Towanna and Cliff his brother are drafted into the U.S. Army and shipped off to boot camp. While in training Towanna is approached by another soldier who is sexually interested in him. Towanna rebuffs the man but agonizes over what's wrong with him that he attracts this kind of attention. He manages one furlough during his training and uses it to propose to Kathy who accepts. Trained as a combat medic Towanna finds himself in Europe attached to a mobile hospital behind enemy lines and desperate for home and the people he loves. When the war nears its end Towanna suffers two horrific losses his best friend is killed when the mobile hospital is strafed on the eve of Hitler's surrender. And his brother Cliff is brought into the field hospital only to die in Towanna's arms. Towanna is sent home and into Kathy's waiting healing arms. His boy Carlon is waiting for him as is his pa and Julie May. All his self-doubts are swept away in Kathy's fierce loving embrace. He's finally home.

Parents and Children in the Mid-Victorian Novel Madeleine Wood, 2020-10-30 This book produces an original argument about the emergence of trauma in the nineteenth century through new readings of Dickens, Emily and Charlotte Brontë, Collins, Gaskell, and Eliot. By presenting family relationships as decisive for our psychological state as well as our social identity, the Victorian authors pushed beyond the contemporary scientific models available to them. Madeleine Wood analyses the literary and historical conditions of the mid-century period that led to this new literary emphasis and which paved the way for the emergence of psychoanalysis in Vienna at the fin de siècle Analysing a series of theoretical texts Madeleine Wood shows that psychoanalysis shares the mid Victorian concern with the unequal relationship between adult and child focusing her reading through Freud's early writings and Jean Laplanche's general theory of seduction The Oxford Companion to Twentieth-century Literature in English Jenny Stringer, 1996 Survey of twentieth century English language writers and writing from around the world celebrating all major genres with entries on literary movements periodicals more than 400 individual works and articles on approximately 2 400 authors
