Exploring Videogames with Deleuze and Guattari Ciara Cremin, 2015-08-13 Videogames are a unique artistic form and to analyse and understand them an equally unique language is required Cremin turns to Deleuze and Guattari's non-representational philosophy to develop a conceptual toolkit for thinking anew about videogames and our relationship to them Rather than approach videogames through a language suited to other media forms Cremin invites us to think in terms of a videogame plane and the compositions of developers and players who bring them to life According to Cremin we are not simply playing videogames we are creating them We exceed our own bodily limitations by assembling forces with the elements they are made up of The book develops a critical methodology that can explain what every videogame irrespective of genre or technology has in common and proceeds on this basis to analyse their differences Drawing from a wide range of examples spanning the history of the medium Cremin discerns the qualities inherent to those regarded as classics and what those qualities enable the player to do Exploring Videogames with Deleuze and Guattari analyses different aspects of the medium including the social and cultural context in which videogames are played to develop a nuanced perspective on gendered narratives caricatures and glorifications of war It considers the processes and relationships that have given rise to industrial giants the spiralling costs of making videogames and the pressure this places developers under to produce standard variations of winning formulas The book invites the reader to embark on a molecular journey through worlds neither virtual nor real exceeding image analogy and metaphor With clear explanations and detailed analysis Cremin demonstrates the value of a Deleuzian approach to the study of videogames making it an accessible and valuable resource for students scholars developers and enthusiasts

Self- and body part localization using virtual reality setups Albert van der Veer ,2019-09-19 This volume presents a line of original experimental studies on the bodily self investigating where people locate themselves in their bodies and how accurate they are at localizing their body parts So far it was not well known whether people locate themselves in one or more specific regions of their bodies On the other hand some systematic distortions in indicating bodily locations were already documented In the present studies participants were therefore asked to indicate their self locations as well as the locations of several of their body parts using a self directed first person perspective pointing paradigm in various virtual reality VR setups different head mounted displays and a large screen immersive display Overall participants were found to locate themselves mainly in the upper face and the upper torso However striking differences in self localization were found when testing in different VR setups Upon further investigation these differences were found to be foremost due to inaccuracies in body part localization When taking these inaccuracies into account differences between setups and also with self localization outside of VR largely disappear Another striking finding was that providing participants in between pointing phases with information about their bodies in the form of a real time animated self avatar did not make them more accurate at locating their own body parts While manipulating their viewpoint to chest height of their self avatar did shift the afterwards indicated locations of their own body parts upwards towards where they were seen on the avatar Potential explanations for the various new findings also from tasks outside of VR are discussed Taken together this volume suggests a differential involvement of multi sensory information processing in experienced self location within the body and the ability to locate body parts Self localization seems to be less flexible possibly because it is strongly grounded in the bodily senses while body part localization appears
