

An elderly couple is walking hand-in-hand on a paved path in front of a large, two-story house with a gabled roof. The woman on the left has white hair and is wearing a brown jacket over a light blue shirt and a long grey skirt. The man on the right has a long white beard and hair, wearing a light-colored button-down shirt under a tan vest and dark shorts. They are both barefoot. The scene is bathed in warm, golden light, suggesting late afternoon or early morning. The house behind them has several windows and a small porch area.

does not give interculturality a normative scaffolding but envisages it differently by identifying some of its polyphonic textures China's rich engagement with interculturality serves to support the importance of being curious about other ways of thinking about the notion beyond the West only As such the issues of culture identity language translation intercultural competence and silent transformations amongst others are re-evaluated in a different light This is a highly informative and carefully presented book providing scientific insights for readers with an interest in interculturality The Western Isles

Today Judith Ennew, 1980-05-22 The Western Isles of Scotland appear to the popular imagination as romantic and remote islands where the inhabitants cling to an archaic culture which is barely integrated into modern industrial society In this book Judith Ennew dispels such myths and confronts the social problems of an economically depressed region without denying its unique cultural aspects She traces the history of the Western Isles as a dynamic process and shows that even the crofting way of life is of recent origin What is so often taken to be an ancient way of life is not a static structure but the continuing result of the development of capitalism Its history is as modern as that of any other living pattern within the United Kingdom Dr Ennew examines the history of land tenure and economy showing how the islands have been integrated into industrial society in the last two hundred years She then explores the current way of life in the area particularly in the northern island of Lewis Finally she considers the future prospects of the islands demonstrating how the inhabitants are trying to develop a consciousness of their own history with which to combat present social ills English Mechanic and Mirror of Science, 1883 A Conflict of Paradigms Rebecca K.
