

INSTALLATION CHECKS

INSTALLATION

Nearly all Onan electric generating sets are installed by the motor home manufacturer. Although the manufacturer must follow safety codes when installing, certain installation problems could arise after the unit is installed and subjected to vibration. There are a few areas that you as the operator should be concerned with. If in doubt about any aspect of your generator set's operation or safety, contact your nearest authorized Onan Service Center. A daily inspection of your installation should include the following:

EXHAUST

Check for leaks around manifolds, gaskets, and welds. Make sure exhaust lines are not heating surrounding areas excessively. If so, have corrected immediately. Remember EXHAUST GASES CONTAIN DEADLY CARBON MONOXIDE. Be sure all holes to the inside of RV from set compartment are sealed to prevent poisonous exhaust gases from entering vehicles.

WARNING

All exhaust shielding supplied with generator set MUST be properly installed to prevent overheating of compartment walls or the possibility of fire.

WARNING

Do not terminate exhaust under vehicle, as carbon monoxide gas is poisonous. Direct exhaust gases away from window and door openings.

FUEL SYSTEM

With set running, check for leaks. Raw fuel will cause fumes which could EXPLODE. Check around carburetor and fuel pump inlets. Make sure fuel lines are not rubbing against anything which could cause breakage.

ELECTRICAL

AC Output

Two AC leads, M1 (hot) and M2 (ground), terminate in generator junction box. These wires should be connected to distribution box with multistrand wire enclosed in a flexible conduit. Check all wires (to and from the generator set) for fraying and loose connections.

Battery Connections: Battery positive (+) connection connects to start solenoid. Battery negative connects to location on rear of generator. Check terminals on set and battery for clean and tight connections.
