Regional Convention Childrens:

International Children's Rights Instruments, 2024-11-25 This collection is an essential supplement to the recent academic handbooks on children's rights studies and international children's rights law. Over the years, the international legal framework on children's rights has evolved into a complex system which includes United Nations treaties and resolutions, regional human rights instruments such as treaties, recommendations, resolutions, and guidelines, both of private and public international law. For students, researchers, and professionals navigating this complex social and legal landscape, it can be challenging. A comprehensive and easily accessible overview of these legal sources is crucial for effectively understanding and promoting children's rights. Edited by leading experts in the field, this book is meticulously designed to provide exactly that, making it an invaluable resource for anyone dedicated to the protection and promotion of children's rights.

Confessing the International Rights of Children, Farhad Malekian, Kerstin Nordlöf, 2012-12-18 Within the sphere of law, it is the recognition of its subjects—women, men, children, and private or public entities—which has been the most prominent facet of national, regional, or international relations. The dominance of the question of recognition has led to the development of the law and the maintenance of its provisions. Obviously, the legal effect of recognition is limited if rights are not implemented entirely. Simultaneously, justice cannot be done within the social structure of any society as long as the basic elements of that society do not properly protect the rights of children. Thus, the complexity one may expect of a legal issue is not just how to deal with the relevant issue in a court of justice but how to prove that the machinery of justice does not own or use the appropriate documents necessary for the examination of the issue. This book on confessing the international rights of children brings together all international documents which are significant to the protection of the rights of children. The introduction to each document presented in the book demonstrates that there is not necessarily any particular need to prove the legal existence of children's rights. They obviously exist with full rights, but the implementation of those rights is indeed not so easy. In addition, as a matter of principle, we must not forget that the natural personality of each child has not been created by national, regional, or international documents but by their very existence within our global environment, constituting human beings of their own age.

National Human Rights Institutions in the Asia Pacific Region, Brian Burdekin, 2007 The purpose of this book is to provide a consolidated collection of materials to facilitate comparison of the various national human rights institutions (NHRIs) already established in the Asia Pacific region against a background of selected international materials and with the assistance of several comparative tables. The latter are not intended to be exhaustive but are designed to assist in identifying and considering the strengths and weaknesses inherent in the legislative mandates of each national institution. While the collection is primarily intended for teaching purposes, it should also be useful to countries considering establishing a national human rights commission or for those which have already done so, strengthening its mandate. For this reason, several sections have been included outlining the relationship which should exist between NHRIs, the Executive, the Legislature the Judiciary and other related institutions and a short section on the importance of the process which should precede their establishment
