Reflective Teaching Practice:

Reflective Teaching Andrew Pollard, Julie Anderson, 2008-07-08 Reflective Teaching is the definitive textbook for reflective classroom professionalism. It offers exceptional support for trainee teachers, mentors, newly qualified teachers and for those engaged in continuing professional development and performance review. Andrew Pollard's Reflective Teaching has been established for over twenty years. Each edition builds on that foundation and offers something new. This edition is enhanced by a new look, a larger format, fresh text design, children's photographs and additional illustrations, making the book more attractive and user friendly than ever before. New content to reflect contemporary innovations such as Personalized Learning, Assessment for Learning, Pupil Consultation and Every Child Matters. Updates throughout in line with new teaching Standards and Competences in each part of the UK. Advanced material to respond to the introduction of Master's Level study within many PGCE courses, the growth in evidence informed professional practice and more coherent continuing professional development. Research Briefings from the Teaching and Learning Research Programme (TLRP), the UK's largest ever coordinated initiative on educational research. Reflective Teaching is the most comprehensive evidence informed handbook on teaching and remains as ever both practical and accessible. This book and its associated resources have extremely serious intentions and contemporary relevance. We wish to support the continuing development of high quality professionals who can enhance pupil attainment and we also want to support new teachers in understanding the contexts in which they work and the significance of what they do. Andrew Pollard. Reflective Teaching is part of a set of integrated and complementary resources. Reflective Teaching: the core handbook for school based professional development. Reflective Teaching Andrew Pollard, Janet Collins, 2005-03-04 Reflective Teaching is the definitive textbook for reflective classroom professionalism. description of what reflective practice is and how it is operationalized by two of its main protagonists John Dewey and Donald Schön as well as some of the limitations of their conceptions This is used as an introduction to how the author further developed their conceptions when operationalizing reflective practice for language teachers through a five stage framework for reflecting on practice for language teachers The author then presents an in depth case study of the reflections of an English as a Foreign Language EFL teacher working in Costa Rica as he moved through the five stages of the framework for reflecting on practice The author then goes on to outline and discuss how reflective practice may be moved forward and calls attention to the importance of emotions in the process of reflection for language teachers

Reflective Language

Teaching Thomas S. C. Farrell, 2015-08-28 The need for ongoing teacher development has been a recurring theme in the field of TESOL in recent years Not everything a language teacher needs to know can be provided at the pre service level and the knowledge base of teaching is constantly changing Based on cutting edge research illustrated through case studies this book outlines strategies for professional development through reflective practice in the language classroom Accessible and comprehensive the book presupposes no prior knowledge of linguistics or language teaching and each chapter includes reflective discussion questions to help the reader apply the strategies and procedures discussed This book will be invaluable to postgraduate students of TESOL and applied linguistics and in service language teachers

Teaching as a Reflective Practice Ian Westbury, Stefan Hopmann, Kurt Riquarts, 2000 This volume presents a mix of translations of classical and modern papers from the German Didaktik tradition newly prepared essays by German scholars and practitioners writing from within the tradition and interpretive essays by U S scholars It brings this tradition which virtually dominated German curricular thought and teacher education until the 1960s when American curriculum theory entered Germany and which is now experiencing a renaissance to the English speaking world where it has been essentially unknown The intent is to capture in one volume the core at least of the tradition of Didaktik and to communicate its potential relevance to English language curricularists and teacher educators It introduces a theoretical tradition which although very different in almost every respect from those we know offers a set of approaches that suggest ways of thinking about problems of reflection on curricular and teaching praxis the core focus of the tradition which the editors believe are accessible to North American readers with appropriate translation These ways of thinking and related praxis are very relevant to notions such as reflective teaching and the discourse on teachers as professionals By raising the possibility that the new tradition of Didaktik can be highly suggestive for thinking through issues related to a number of central ideas within contemporary discourse and for exploring the implications of these ideas for both teacher education and for a curriculum theory appropriate to these new contexts for theorizing this book opens up a gold mine of theoretical and practical possibilities

Reflective Teaching Practices Elizabeth L. Keeling, 2012 Reflective teaching practice has been seen as a tool for continuous teacher improvement However before developing a novice teacher s capacity to effectively practice reflective teaching methods we must understand what a novice teacher thinks about and why they have those considerations about their teaching practice. Thus, this research sought to gain a rich description of how novice teachers in a traditional secondary setting reflect in their daily teaching practice. This research explored how novice teachers describe their thinking as they prepare to teach and as they reflect back upon their teaching. This research project sheds light on what novice teachers tend to reflect upon, increasing the likelihood that mentors and preservice training programs may better support new teachers in developing reflective teaching practices. Ultimately, if as the literature suggests, when reflective teachers are more aware of the impact of their decisions and actions, then they can be more effective with their students and produce greater results. To explore this, a qualitative study involving anticipatory reflection, observation, and retrospective reflective interviews was conducted to explore how and what novice teachers reflected about in their teaching practice. This study found that novice teachers reflect in the three areas that Jay and Johnson (2002) describe: descriptive, comparative, and critical. Thus, suggesting that novice teachers are capable of reflecting at higher levels of complexity than previously noted in most of the stage theories in teacher development. The results also support a non-linear approach to teacher development and suggest a re-conceptualization of Jay and Johnson's (2002) taxonomy. All participants identified barriers to maintaining reflective teaching practices. They also described that participating in this study had a positive impact on them and their practices. They reinforced the importance of having ongoing opportunities for structured reflection time to reflect openly and the benefits of non-evaluative feedback.

The Art of Reflective Teaching Carol R. Rodgers, 2020
 The Art of Reflective Teaching examines what it means to be present in one's teaching. The book begins with an in-depth definition of presence from several different angles. The text goes on to delineate what a teacher may be present to, providing a map for useful discussions among teachers and between teachers and students. The book then outlines the structure of reflection, its intentional practice, and its importance to presence. Finally, it provides a detailed outline for teaching presence to new and preservice teachers. Rodgers's curriculum integrates mindfulness practice with reflection, using presence as a bridge between the two. Drawing on her own experiences and those of her students, the author demonstrates how reflective teaching is grounded in a living and evolving philosophy of practice.

Book Features:
 Shows educators how to mentally and emotionally connect themselves to their students, their classroom, and their teaching.
 Provides a tested structure for reflective practice based on the work of both John Dewey and the author's own practice.
 Includes a course outline for teaching presence that can be used by teacher educators, professional developers, and teacher inquiry groups.
