Slip Roll Forming Machine Plays Important Part in Sheet Metal Working

Quick adjustment of Forming Machines to the various demands made on them, constitute tangible savings in production costs. In this age, special machines, specially constructed machines are too expensive and bothersome to put up with.

Above is illustrated Pexto Forming Machine No. 382, one of a type largely employed in sheet metal shops for practically all light work of a general nature. An important feature is the easy way that work is removed after being formed. Just open a latch, raise the upper roll with a lever, and remove the work from the end without damage or the loss of a minute.

Pexto Sheet Metal Working Machines are built for speed and dependability. A Pexto record of which we are proud is a set of machines purchased in 1884 by D. J. Dietz of Central Bridge, N. Y., from a man whose brother-in-law had used the same machines all his life until he died at the age of 88. These same machines are in use today by Melville W. Mead of Delanson, N. Y.

Sheet metal working students should send for our catalog 16-A, and one of our free Wall Cards—a card of tables and other valuable shop data.

The first and third Pexto Shop-Ways told how the blank for the body of this can was squared up with Pexto Squaring Shears and then edged with the Edging Machine to form a hook-link.

This fourth step is to form the cylinder. With the Pexto Slip Roll Forming Machine No. 382 (see No. 382), this is a simple operation. One run thru the rolls, the blank comes out as a perfect cylinder. For a supporting cylinder, a special Pexto attachment may be fitted to this machine. This is convenient when the operation is skilled. Watch for Pexto Shop-Ways No. 5.

Handy 36-page reference, $2.00. Send for free prospectus.

How to make the pattern of this sheet metal waste can and other sheet metal problems, when how to use machines and tools for making sheet metal—read in our new book—Sheet Metal Workers' Manual—the $2.00 book.
