QUESTION I have a 1994 Ford Taurus with 100,000 miles. The engine is running fine, but the car is making a noise that sounds like a rattling or clunking sound. It seems to be coming from the front end. What could be the cause of this noise?

ANSWER The most common cause of a rattling or clunking sound from the front end of a car is worn suspension components. The most likely culprits are the ball joints, tie rod ends, and control arms. These components are responsible for keeping the wheels in contact with the road and absorbing bumps and potholes. When they wear out, they can create a clunking or rattling sound, especially when driving over uneven surfaces or turning the steering wheel. Other possible causes include worn brake pads or rotors, or a loose engine mount. To diagnose the problem, you should have a mechanic inspect the front suspension and steering components. They will likely perform a visual inspection and a "shake test" to identify the source of the noise. Once the worn component is identified, it can be replaced, and the noise should be eliminated.
