The Private Side of the Canton Trade, 1700-1840 Paul A. Van Dyke, Susan E. Schopp, 2018-03-13 It is not often recognized that China was one of the few places in the early modern world where all merchants had equal access to the market. This study shows that private traders, regardless of the volume of their trade, were granted the same privileges in Canton as the large East India companies. All of these companies relied to some extent on private capital to finance their operations Without the investments from individuals the trade with China would have been greatly hindered Competitors large and small traded alongside each other while enemies traded alongside enemies Buddhists Muslims Catholics Protestants Parsees Armenians Hindus and others lived and worked within the small area in the western suburbs of Canton designated for foreigners Cantonese shopkeepers were not allowed to discriminate against any foreign traders In fact the shopkeepers were generally working in a competitive environment providing customer oriented service that generated goodwill friendship and trust These contributed to the growth of the trade as a whole While many private traders were involved in smuggling opium others such as Nathan Dunn were much opposed to it The case studies in this volume demonstrate that fortunes could be made in China by trading in legitimate items just as successfully as in illegitimate ones which tellingly suggests that the rapid spread of opium smuggling in China could be a result of inadequate rather than excessive regulation by the Qing government For this absorbing book Van Dyke and Schopp have convened excellent scholars junior and senior to throw new light on the foreign merchants outside the East India companies who shaped China's engagement with the world at least as much as the companies men did if not more The slumbering field of foreign trade in Qing China has come back to life Timothy Brook University of British Columbia Much scholarship on the China trade has focused on the activities of the vast state sponsored companies This book flips the script Now we know that right under the noses of those economic behemoths smaller private traders from Europe America and China were quietly reshaping the trade with their innovation networking grit and dreams John R Haddad The Pennsylvania State University

What we learn and when we learn it: sensitive periods in development Etienne De Villers-Sidani, Virginia

Penhune, 2014-11-21 The impact of training or experience is not the same at all points in development Children who receive music lessons or learn a second language before age 7-8 are more proficient as adults Early exposure to drugs or trauma makes people more likely to become addicted or depressed later in life Rat pups exposed to specific frequencies from 9-13 days post partum show expanded cortical representations of these frequencies Young birds must hear and copy their native song within 1-2 months of birth or they may never learn it at all These are examples of sensitive periods developmental windows where maturation and specific experience interact to produce differential long term effects on the brain and behavior While still controversial evidence for the existence of sensitive periods has grown as has our understanding of the underlying mechanisms of brain plasticity Behavioral evidence from studies of language psychopathology or vision in humans has been complemented by evidence elucidating molecular gene and hormonal mechanisms in animals It has been proposed that sensitive periods can be both opened and closed by specific experience and that there are multiple overlapping sensitive periods that occur throughout development as functions come on line It is also likely that experience dependent behavioral or brain plasticity accrued during one sensitive period can serve as a scaffold on which later experience and plasticity can build Based on current knowledge there are a number of broad questions and challenges to be addressed in this domain

these include generating new information about the neurobiological mediators of structural and functional changes proposing models of brain development that will better predict when sensitive periods should occur and what functions are implicated investigation of the interaction between experience during a sensitive period and pre existing individual differences and the relationship between experience during a sensitive period and on going experience The goal of this Research Topic is to bring together scientists in different fields whose work addresses these issues including animal and human developmental neuroscience language and cognitive development education developmental psychopathology and sensory neuroscience
