Mathematics of Random Phenomena P. Krée,C. Soize,1986-10-31 Approach your problems from the right end It isn't that they can't see the solution It is and begin with the answers Then one day that they can't see the problem perhaps you will find the final question G K Chesterton The Scandal of Father The Hermit Clad in Crane Feathers in R Brown The point of a Pin van Gulik's The Chinese Maze Murders Growing specialization and diversification have brought a host of monographs and textbooks on increasingly specialized topics However the tree of knowledge of mathematics and related fields does not grow only by putting forth new branches It also happens quite often in fact that branches which were thought to be completely disparate are suddenly seen to be related Further the kind and level of sophistication of mathematics applied in various sciences has changed drastically in recent years measure theory is used non trivially in regional and theoretical economics algebraic geometry interacts with physics the Minkowsky lemma coding theory and the structure of water meet one another in packing and covering theory quantum fields crystal defects and mathematical programming profit from homotopy theory Lie algebras are relevant to filtering and prediction and electrical engineering can use Stein spaces And in addition to this there are such new emerging subdisciplines as experimental mathematics CFD completely integrable systems chaos synergetics and large scale order which are almost impossible to fit into the existing classification schemes     Shock Waves & Explosions P.L. Sachdev,2004-06-11 Understanding the causes and effects of explosions is important to experts in a broad range of disciplines including the military industrial and environmental research aeronautic engineering and applied mathematics Offering an introductory review of historic research Shock Waves and Explosions brings analytic and computational methods to a wide audience in a clear and thorough way Beginning with an overview of the research on combustion and gas dynamics in the 1970s and 1980s the author brings you up to date by covering modeling techniques and asymptotic and perturbative methods and ending with a chapter on computational methods Most of the book deals with the mathematical analysis of explosions but computational results are also included wherever they are available Historical perspectives are provided on the advent of nonlinear science as well as on the mathematical study of the blast wave phenomenon both when visualized as a point explosion and when simulated as the expansion of a high pressure gas This volume clearly reveals the ingenuity of the human mind to conceptualize model and mathematically analyze highly complicated nonlinear phenomena such as nuclear explosions It presents a solid foundation of knowledge that encourages further research and original ideas
