HEALTH CARE OF PATIENTS WITH ANOREXIA

A large number of people are now aware of the problem of feeding disorders that is characteristic of the industrialized countries of Western Europe. Eating disorders are characterized by severe disadvantages in eating habits and behavior. Media that in a variety of ways attracts the younger population and sends them messages about the ideal of beauty have a powerful influence on this disorder. Since young people still do not have the formed personality and attitudes, as one of the psychological mechanisms in this period emerges identification with famous and famous personalities. Each life span is marked by different, new fashion trends that shape their ways of dress and behavior and other segments of the life of young people. The concept of beauty, especially a woman's body, which includes under-weight body weight occurs in the second half of the 20th and early 21st century. Young women, i.e. girls, in order to be trendy, must be thin and start with drastic mood and diets. Trending trends is one of the main reasons for increasing the number of young people with the eating disorder. Food is becoming more and more a space for social control, and less space satisfies the need or pleasure of the self. Feeding from the area of necessity and satisfaction expands its symbolic area and meaning, thus opening the way for its "psychopathology." Feeding disorders often occur in parallel with other psychiatric disorders such as depression, drug abuse, and anxiety. In addition, people who suffer from eating disorders may have a wide range of body health complications, including severe heart disease and kidney failure, which may end in death. Therefore, recognition of eating disorders as actual and curable diseases is of crucial importance.
