A U.S. Army Medical Base in World War I France Peter Wever, 2019-08-05 Nothing in the small village of Bazoilles sur Meuse in the northeast of France bears witness today to the 13 000 bed Bazoilles Hospital Center located there during World War I Yet in 1918 1919 more than 63 000 American soldiers received treatment there three out of every 100 U S servicemen and women who served in Europe This richly illustrated history describes daily life and medical care at Bazoilles providing a vivid picture of the conditions for both patients and personnel along with stories of those who worked there and those who were treated or died there

Heritage Stone Conservation in Urban Churchyards Mary J. Thornbush, Sylvia E. Thornbush, 2018-03-16 This book provides a cross disciplinary perspective on the degradation and deterioration of the cultural record encompassed by urban headstones located in parish churchyards Its interdisciplinary approach allows the geomorphological analysis of rock weathering to be combined with the impacts on the cultural record its interpretation and management In particular by examining the impacts of air pollution on the weathering of these cultural markers cross temporal assessments can provide valuable information concerning the condition of the record and its sustainability potential as monuments of cultural heritage Churchyards located in urban settings have grown in interest for the purposes of heritage conservation research Specifically headstones represent part of the historical and archaeological record and are recognised as a component of historical archaeology They are also now approached from the standpoint of heritage conservation either as monuments or cultural stone as well as being part of necrogeography through their address of burial and stone decay In this brief headstones located in parish churchyards in England and Scotland as part of the Anglican record for the Church of England and the Presbyterian record for the Church of Scotland were examined using non destructive methods based on field observations since preliminary research in 2006 as part of a decadal scale long term study This multisite investigation captures the record since the 17th century and mainly comprises limestone England and sandstone Scotland headstone markers that still remain upright Most studied headstones appear before the 19th century when this study s temporal focus terminates Seriations performed on the available record have revealed trends in style based on inscriptions epitaphs and motifs as well as quantified dimensions shapes and more This study represents an attempt to pictorially record cultural stone and to observe cross temporal and spatial change at various scales As such it offers a valuable resource for practitioners e g conservators and archaeologists as well as for students and researchers
