INTRODUCTION

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF WILLIAM CONGREVE

William Congreve grew up in Ireland, where he attended Killybegs College. There he met Jonathan Swift, a fellow student who would become his lifelong friend. He also attended Trinity College in Dublin. Later, Congreve moved to London to study law but switched to playwrighting instead. He wrote ten plays (six comedies and four tragedies) between 1690-1700, some of which became the most famous plays of the Restoration period. His career as a playwright was short-lived and he entered retirement early. He never married but was involved with several famous actresses, many of whom starred in his plays. He died from wounds he received from a carriage accident and was buried in Poets' Corner in Westminster Abbey.

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

Congreve's play was written and performed during the end of what scholars call the Restoration, the period in which Charles II was restored to the throne in 1660 (Charles II's father, Charles I, was beheaded on charges of treason on January 30, 1649 after a lengthy civil war) and England briefly became a commonwealth with Oliver Cromwell as its leader (in 1700, the nation was still struggling to define succession). King William III, a Dutch prince who fought over French borders in 1688, to rule the Protestant nation alongside his wife, cousin, Queen Mary II, an event known as the Glorious Revolution. The pair essentially took the throne from the then-reigning Catholic King James II, Mary's father, who fled to France. They promised to rule the nation well by upholding its Protestant traditions, something many citizens felt James II wasn't doing. Congreve weaves much of this political detail into his plays through its preoccupation with marriage, capital, and law.

RELATED LITERARY WORKS

The Man of Mode, Or Sir Fopling Flutter by George Etherege. Etherege's play, first performed in 1632, is the story of the wealthy man-about-town Dorimant and his efforts to woo the beautiful and headstrong Harriet. The marriage is contrary to the wishes of Harriet's mother, Lady Woodvile, who has heard about Dorimant's irreverent reputation and is eager to protect her daughter by marrying her off to a more suitable man. Though Congreve's play is much more forward thinking in terms of the way he portrays women and their struggle for independence, his play contains many of the same stock characters found in Etherege's play, such as the flirtatious hero, the overbearing mother, and the stubborn heroine.

PLOT SUMMARY

Before the play begins, a number of important events have taken place in the lives of the main characters, which Congreve reveals throughout the play. Arabella's first husband, Lingard, has died and left her his fortune. She begins a secret affair with Edward Mirabell. They end the affair and she gets married to a man Mirabell has selected (Fuball) because Mirabell is afraid that they will conceive a child out of wedlock. Congreve never explains why Mirabell just doesn't marry her herself; Mirabell and Mrs. Arabella still remain good friends after the affair ends.

Mirabell begins courting Mrs. Fuball's cousin, Millamant, who lives with Millamant's aunt and Mrs. Fuball's mother, Lady Wishfort. To gain Wishfort's favor for his marriage to Millamant, Mirabell flatters Wishfort and teaches much attention on her. Wishfort becomes convinced that he loves her and falls for her. However, after Wishfort's best friend, Mrs. Marwood, reveals what Mirabell was up to, her feelings for Mirabell change from love to hate. Now, she will not grant her permission for Mirabell to marry Millamant, an important problem because she controls Millamant's £2,000 dowry.

The night before the first scene of the play, the first time Mirabell has gone back to Wishfort's house since she found out his plan, Wishfort unconsciously discovers Mirabell from her "lucky night" club in front of Millamant, who doesn't stand
