Bergey's Manual of

Determinative Bacteriology Society of American Bacteriologists, David Hendricks Bergey, 1923 The Role of Biofilms in Device-Related Infections Mark Shirtliff, Jeff G. Leid, 2008-12-19 Approximately 60% of all hospital associated infections over one million cases per year are due to biofilms that have formed on indwelling medical devices. Device related biofilm infections increase hospital stays and add over one billion dollars year to U S hospitalization costs. Since the use and the types of indwelling medical devices commonly used in modern healthcare are continuously expanding especially with an aging population the incidence of biofilm infections will also continue to rise. The central problem with microbial biofilm infections of foreign bodies is their propensity to resist clearance by the host immune system and all antimicrobial agents tested to date. In fact compared to their free floating planktonic counterparts microbes within a biofilm are 50 500 times more resistant to antimicrobial agents. Therefore achieving therapeutic and non lethal dosing regimens within the human host is impossible. The end result is a conversion from an acute infection to one that is persistent chronic and recurrent most often requiring device removal in order to eliminate the infection. This text will describe the major types of device related infections and will explain the host pathogen and the unique properties of their interactions in order to gain a better understanding of these recalcitrant infections.
