Additional £2million funding for GLAA

Home Office minister Brandon Lewis announced that additional funding would be made available to assist the newly formed Gangmasters and Labour Abuse Authority to perform its enhanced role.

In a statement made on 15 December 2016, the Minister of State for Policing and Fire Service said: "A new reallocation of around £2m will support the Gangmasters and Labour Abuse Authority to use new police-style enforcement powers set out in the Immigration Act 2016 to tackle labour exploitation including modern slavery across the economy. Through greater resources to use these new powers, the GLAA will be able to undertake more investigations into modern slavery offences that might otherwise fall to the police, saving police time and improving the law enforcement response to exploitation of the most vulnerable workers."

The funding will be used to resource more investigators and recruiting has begun already.

GLA chief joins panel to review UK employment practices

GLA Chief Executive Paul Broadbent was honoured to accept an invitation to be part of the expert panel for the Taylor Review into modern employment practices. The project – led by Matthew Taylor, Chief Executive of the Royal Society of Arts – will look into the scale of the 'gig economy' in the UK and is to be launched with a regional tour to discuss the UK's labour market.

The announcement came after the Prime Minister commissioned Matthew Taylor to look at how employment practices need to change in order to keep pace with modern business models. The team behind the Taylor Review into Modern Employment Practices will now travel the country, talking to employees and employers about the UK's labour market. Places to be visited include: Maidstone, Coventry and Glasgow, where the panel will speak to workers and employers operating in sectors such as the gig and rural economies and manufacturing. The aim is to gain a complete understanding of the impact of modern working practices and examine how different labour markets work.

Matthew Taylor said: "I am delighted to announce the other members of the review team; they bring a wealth of experience and insight to our work. We have a lot of research and policy to discuss but the most important part of our process is getting out and about to talk
