

To My Daughter, My Friend

No one could understand my relationship with you,
 We're different from other mothers & daughters, it's true,
 For such a long time, being only just the two of us,
 Loving, playing, teaching, learning, making a fuss,
 You will always be my itsy bitsy tiny baby,
 Am I ready to let you grow up and leave? Maybe
 No words can express the pride that fills my heart,
 Leaving the nest with your own life to start.
 Setting your own goals and always making the grade,
 Learning so much from mistakes you have made.
 You possess beauty, love, passion and grace,
 no matter if you are in camo or in lace,
 When you are troubled, I wish you peace,
 When you want to quit, just don't cease,
 When you are sad, remember times of joy,
 Make your way and create, don't ever destroy.
 And forever and ever whenever you feel alone,
 Remember your mom, you can always come home.
 I know you will have success in all that you do,
 Know always and forever, how much I love you!

the Low Countries local and regional issues concerning multiculturalism and colonial belatedness have raised important questions about the possible grounds on which postcolonial critical concepts might be not only translated but also generated afresh to suit these paradoxically new contexts As The Postcolonial Low Countries incisively demonstrates the Low Countries demand a careful rearticulation of such postcolonial readymades as hybridity accommodation and creolization Gathering together contributions from both internationally renowned scholars and newly established researchers in the field The Postcolonial Low Countries maps previously underexplored national and transnational literary critical trajectories The book challenges in boundary shifting ways current readings of the so described multicultural and postcolonial Netherlands and Belgium
