

objective of study

The objective of a study refers to the purpose or goal that the research is trying to achieve. It outlines what the researcher intends to accomplish and provides a clear direction for the study. The objective of a study can be exploratory, descriptive, or explanatory.

1. Exploratory objectives: These objectives aim to gain a better understanding of a topic or problem, usually through qualitative research methods such as interviews or observation.
2. Descriptive objectives: These objectives aim to provide a detailed and accurate representation of a phenomenon, usually through quantitative research methods such as surveys or experiments.
3. Explanatory objectives: These objectives aim to identify cause-and-effect relationships between variables, usually through experimental research methods such as randomized controlled trials.

The objective of a study is an important factor in determining the research design, data collection methods, and analysis techniques used. By having a clear objective, researchers can ensure that their study is well-structured, relevant, and contributes to the advancement of knowledge in their field.

How to choose study field

Choosing a field of study can be a challenging decision, but with the right approach, it can also be an exciting and fulfilling process. Here are some steps to help you choose a field of study:

1. Reflect on your interests and passions: Think about what you enjoy doing, what subjects you are naturally drawn to, and what topics you find most engaging. This can help you identify potential fields of study that align with your interests.
2. Consider your strengths and skills: What are you naturally good at? What skills do you possess that you could apply to a future career? Matching your strengths and skills with potential

A History of Modern Psychology in Context Wade Pickren,Alexandra Rutherford,2010-02-19 In A History of Modern Psychology in Context the authors resist the traditional storylines of great achievements by eminent people or schools of thought that rise and fall in the wake of scientific progress Instead psychology is portrayed as a network of scientific and professional practices embedded in specific contexts The narrative is informed by three key concepts indigenization reflexivity and social constructionism and by the fascinating interplay between disciplinary Psychology and everyday psychology Problems of Life and Mind: The study of psychology: its object, scope, and method George Henry Lewes,1879

Personality Tests and Assessments (Psychology Revivals) Philip E. Vernon,2014-01-27 Originally published in 1953 this book provided the first comprehensive account of methods of personality assessment by a British author It starts with a short survey of personality theory pointing out the difficulties in any method of testing or assessment Next it describes the weaknesses of the common interview method Throughout the emphasis is on methods which are usable in educational or vocational guidance and selection not on methods which are mainly of scientific interest Thereafter it takes up each main type of technique tests based on physique or psychological measures on expressive movement such as gestures and handwriting tests of behaviour including War Office Selection Board house party methods ratings and rating scales questionnaires and so called projective techniques The evidence for or against each test or method is surveyed and numerous references provided for relevant literature Illustrative excerpts are given of many of the more promising tests and some pictorial illustrations British work in this field at the time is covered completely and an attempt is made to provide a fair summary of the main contributions of American and other psychologists of the day

Educational Objectives and the Teaching of Educational Psychology Edgar Stones,2012 The purpose of this book is to promote discussion about educational objectives generally and objectives in the teaching of educational psychology in particular To this end Part 1 contains a review of the literature concerned with these two subjects and also reports on investigations into the views of British students teachers college staffs and educational psychologists on the question of the objectives of educational psychology in teacher preparation A comprehensive bibliography is provided A further important section of Part 1 proposes a method of systematizing teaching objectives and suggests a heuristic device for the generation of objectives at different levels of conceptual generality and complexity of learning. An example of this model in the field of educational psychology is presented which illustrates the general approach to the generation of teaching objectives and proposes a specific approach to the production of teaching objectives in educational psychology. In Part 2 a selection of readings in the fields of objectives and educational psychology provides the reader with some of the key source material referred to in Part 1. As well as being a valuable and stimulating addition to the current debate on the specifying of educational objectives, the arguments in this book about the role of educational psychology in teacher preparation raise some fundamental questions for those concerned with teacher education.
