Engineering and Management grade 66 0% Edinburgh Napier University language English abstract 1 Abstract It is said that a Kanban System improves a process by changing the information flow in the process and rearranging rules of responsibilities The purpose of the study was to find out what a Kanban is what does it make the superior application to conventional western strategies and what are the weak points of it Furthermore the study aims to have a look at the supporting environment to find out if there are requirements for a Kanban system to be successful To control and to measure the success of an introduced Kanban system various methods and tools were examined compared with conventional methods and tools and presented Finally the study tried to use all collected information for a theoretical approach how to introduce a Kanban system step by step To get an unprejudiced sight on this topic the development over the last years scientific journals and books from the early 80s until today were inspected The principal conclusion of the study was that Kanban can be a very efficient method to improve processes to reveal problems and to involve worker more in processes for improved motivation that results in a process improvement But this needs a good prepared environment with trained staff through all levels And the more a process is complex due to complex products the more it is essential that the environment is working properly Furthermore the need of controlling tools and proper consequences seemed to be a significant part that decides over success or fail   Integrating Kanban with MRP II Raymond S. Louis,2005-02-28 If you manage inventory you probably use MRPII a system based on a push method that embraces work and purchase order execution MRPII helps you plan and integrate data relevant to your entire organization But when you have shifts in demand you have to 1 Realign and cancel hundreds of open manufacturing and purchase orders and then 2 issue new orders Another system kanban is designed specifically to replenish inventory in just in time manufacturing As consumption occurs the kanban manual system triggers replenishment signals to the source of supply so that both production and the supplier are constantly reacting to actual consumption Compared to MRPII kanban lowers inventory and minimizes shortages But the manual process of recalculating every part number by hand and triggering replenishment by faxing or calling suppliers is time consuming and non value adding Automating kanban by blending the planning strength of MRPII with manual kanban pull methods enhances your flexibility and competitive position MRP s forward projection capability is used to recalculate kanban lot size perform a simulation to protect against non linear demand inform production areas and suppliers of the anticipated demand levels for resource planning calculate staffing requirements for flexible work cells This system Automatically recalculates and triggers replenishment Integrates suppliers into the manufacturing loop Uses bar codes to enhance speed and accuracy of the receipt process Before moving in this direction preparatory work is required Work cells should be constructed with material located at the point of use Container options and transportation methods need to be selected kanban lot size calculations and work cell staffing modules to develop This book will help you deal with these and other topics You will be able to take advantage of the author s expertise in the design implementation and evaluation of these systems   Scrumban - Essays on Kanban
