Abstract

The authors investigate the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a training group (n = 10) and a control group (n = 10). The training group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program, while the control group remained sedentary. The results showed that the training group experienced significant increases in muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile compared to the control group. The authors conclude that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is effective in improving muscle strength, body composition, and metabolic profile in sedentary, middle-aged men.
