Shaver, 2012-01-22 In the formative years of the Methodist Church in the United States women played significant roles as proselytizers organizers lay ministers and majority members Although women s participation helped the church to become the nation s largest denomination by the mid nineteenth century their official roles diminished during that time In Beyond the Pulpit Lisa Shaver examines Methodist periodicals as a rhetorical space to which women turned to find and make self meaning In 1818 Methodist Magazine first published memoirs that eulogized women as powerful witnesses for their faith on their deathbeds As Shaver observes it was only in death that a woman could achieve the status of minister Another Methodist publication the Christian Advocate was America s largest circulated weekly by the mid 1830s It featured the Ladies Department a column that reinforced the canon of women as dutiful wives mothers and household managers Here the church also affirmed women in the important rhetorical and evangelical role of domestic preacher Outside the Ladies Department women increasingly appeared in little narratives in which they were portrayed as models of piety and charity benefactors organizers Sunday school administrators and teachers missionaries and ministers assistants These texts cast women into nondomestic roles that were institutionally sanctioned and widely disseminated By 1841 the Ladies Repository and Gatherings of the West was engaging women in discussions of religion politics education science and a variety of intellectual debates As Shaver posits by providing a forum for women writers and readers the church gave them an official rhetorical space and the license to define their own roles and spheres of influence As such the periodicals of the Methodist church became an important public venue in which women s voices were heard and their identities explored
