

PROJECT OF THE MONTH

Castle view

by Peter Ashworth

This unique restaurant building adjacent to a residential development in Northampton, designed specifically to be visitors' contact with the surrounding countryside. Built across multiple levels, the design makes efficient use of a compact site. The varied exterior pattern of grey brick and stone defines each layer of the house and contrasts the new structure with the neighbouring stable ruins. The building features two private roof terraces connected by a lightweight glass bridge that spans up the steep bank. Each part of the property has a very different facade. The front entrance leads into a public area, housing the main restaurant, while overlooking an area of the surrounding landscape and fields. A series of windows only opened at night, and operate externally at the first floor level. The rear addition features high glass terraces, allowing the view of large expanses of ground at ground-floor level. The full-height openings bring natural light into the building. The raised sitting terrace with apartment is four feet from the interior and exterior, with external concrete steps extending seamlessly from inside to out.
