Nachum Ulanovsky presents the conceptual empirical and technological underpinnings that enabled this new field. Natural neuroscience researchers posit that when studying any brain region in any animal whether standard mammalian species such as rodents and primates or nonstandard species it is crucial to pursue the animal's natural behaviors and to consider the natural problems it needs to solve. By preventing rich natural behaviors says Ulanovsky we miss key aspects of brain function and we may not even know what we miss. The author surveys recent studies that have begun to move in this direction across multiple subfields of neuroscience including sensory cognitive social and behavioral neuroscience. He discusses technological advances that are allowing the pursuit of more naturalistic experiments including methods for recording neural activity in freely behaving freely moving animals e.g. wired and wireless electrophysiology and imaging methods for manipulating neural activity in freely moving animals e.g. wired and wireless optogenetics and methods for quantifying the details of behavior. He makes connections across the four major scientific disciplines that focus on understanding behavior neuroscience behavioral ecology ethology and psychology bringing them closer together and closer to real life.

Religious experiences behaviors thoughts and emotions are determined at least in part by natural physical processes. As a result the empirical methods used in psychology to try to identify the natural mechanisms that influence why we act think and feel the way we do can provide important insights into the fundamental and universal phenomena of religion.
