Developing Generic Support for Doctoral Students Susan Carter, Deborah Laurs, 2014-03-26 This multidisciplinary multi voiced book looks at the practice and pedagogy of generic across campus support for doctoral students With a global imperative for increased doctoral completions universities around the world are providing more generic support This book represents collegial cross fertilisation focussed on generic pedagogy provided by contributors who are practitioners working and researching at the pan disciplinary level which complements supervision In the UK funding for two weeks annual training in transferable skills for each doctoral scholarship recipient has caused an explosion of such teaching which is now flourishing elsewhere too for example endorsed by the Carnegie Initiative on the Doctorate in the USA and developed extensively in Australia Generic doctoral support is expanding yet is a relatively new kind of teaching practised extensively only in the last decade and with its own ethical practical and pedagogical complexities These raise a number of questions How is generic support funded and situated within institutions Should some sessions be compulsory for doctoral students Where do the boundaries lie between what can be taught generically or left to supervisors as discipline specific To what extent is generic work pastoral What are its main benefits Its challenges Its objectives Over the last two decades supervision has been investigated and theorised as a teaching practice a discussion this book extends to generic doctoral support This edited book has contributions from a wide range of authors and includes short inset narratives from academic authorities accumulatively enabling discussion of practice and the establishment of a benchmark for this growing topic

The Routledge Doctoral Supervisor's Companion Melanie Walker, Pat Thomson, 2010-04-19 Accompanying The Routledge Doctoral Student's Companion this book examines what it means to be a doctoral student in education and the social sciences providing a guide for those supervising students Exploring the key role and pedagogical challenges that face supervisors in students personal development the contributors outline the research capabilities which are essential for confidence quality and success in doctorate level research Providing guidance about helpful resources and methodological support the chapters frame important questions within the history of debates act as a road map through international literatures make suggestions for good practice raise important questions and provide answers to key pedagogical issues provide advice on enabling students scholarly careers and identities While there is no one solution to ideal supervision this wide ranging text offers resources that will help supervisors develop their own personal approach to supervision Ideal for all supervisors whether assisting part time or full time students it is also highly suitable for helping academics to support international students who confront Western doctoral traditions and academic cultures helping both supervisor and student to understand why things are as they are

Helping Doctoral Students Write Barbara Kamler, Pat Thomson, 2014-03-21 Helping Doctoral Students Write offers a proven approach to effective doctoral writing By treating research as writing and writing as research the authors offer pedagogical strategies for doctoral supervisors that will assist the production of well argued and lively dissertations It is clear that many doctoral candidates find research writing complicated and difficult but the advice they receive often glosses over the complexities of writing and or locates the problem in the writer Kamler and Thomson provide a highly effective framework for scholarly work that is located in personal institutional and cultural contexts The pedagogical approach developed in the book is based on the notion of writing as a social practice This approach allows supervisors to think of doctoral writers as novices who need to learn new ways with words as they enter the discursive practices of scholarly communities This involves learning sophisticated writing practices with specific sets of conventions and textual characteristics The authors offer supervisors practical advice on helping with commonly encountered writing tasks such as the proposal the journal abstract the literature review and constructing the dissertation argument The first edition of this book has helped many academics and thousands of research students produce better written material Now fully updated the second edition includes Examples from a broader range of academic disciplines A new chapter on writing from the thesis for peer reviewed journals More advice on reading and note taking performance and conferences Further information on developing a personal academic writing style and Advice on the use of social media blogs tweets and wikis to create trans disciplinary and trans national networks and conversations Their discussion of the complexities of forming a scholarly identity is illustrated throughout by stories and writings of actual doctoral students In conclusion they present a persuasive and proven argument that universities must move away from simply auditing supervision to supporting the development of scholarly research communities Any supervisor keen to help their students develop as academics will find the ideas and practical solutions presented in this book fascinating and insightful reading
