Public Health Informatics and Information Systems J.A.

Magnuson, Paul C. Fu, Jr., 2013-11-29 This revised edition covers all aspects of public health informatics and discusses the creation and management of an information technology infrastructure that is essential in linking state and local organizations in their efforts to gather data for the surveillance and prevention. Public health officials will have to understand basic principles of information resource management in order to make the appropriate technology choices that will guide the future of their organizations. Public health continues to be at the forefront of modern medicine given the importance of implementing a population based health approach and to addressing chronic health conditions. This book provides informatics principles and examples of practice in a public health context. In doing so it clarifies the ways in which newer information technologies will improve individual and community health status. This book's primary purpose is to consolidate key information and promote a strategic approach to information systems and development making it a resource for use by faculty and students of public health as well as the practicing public health professional. Chapter highlights include: The Governmental and Legislative Context of Informatics, Assessing the Value of Information Systems, Ethics, Information Technology and Public Health, and Privacy, Confidentiality and Security. Review questions are featured at the end of every chapter. Aside from its use for public health professionals, the book will be used by schools of public health, clinical and public health nurses and students, schools of social work, allied health and environmental sciences.

BioWatch and Public

Health Surveillance National Research Council, Institute of Medicine, Board on Life Sciences, Board on Chemical Sciences and Technology, Board on Health Sciences Policy, Committee on Effectiveness of National Biosurveillance Systems: BioWatch and the Public Health System, 2011-01-25 Following the attacks of September 11, 2001 and the anthrax letters, the ability to detect biological threats as quickly as possible became a top priority. In 2003 the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) introduced the BioWatch program, a federal monitoring system intended to speed detection of specific biological agents that could be released in aerosolized form during a biological attack. The present volume evaluates the costs and merits of both the current BioWatch program and the plans for a new generation of BioWatch devices. BioWatch and Public Health Surveillance also examines infectious disease surveillance through hospitals and public health agencies in the United States and considers whether BioWatch and traditional infectious disease surveillance are redundant or complementary.
