

Geography toolkit

Geography is concerned with the changes taking place in all living and non-living elements of the Earth's surface and atmosphere. The elements interact to produce the diverse landscapes that make up the world around us. Geographers are concerned with the world's people, communities and cultures. Of particular interest are the ways in which the activities of people impact on places.

In this chapter we reflect on how people view their place in the world. These worldviews help geographers understand people's attitudes towards the natural world and its resources. We also learn how to read maps and create a cross-section, and find out about the use of different types of photographs in studying our world.

OVERVIEW QUESTIONS

- 5A How do people's worldviews affect the way they interact with the natural, managed and built environments?
- 5B What types of maps and photographs are used by geographers, and what are the conventions used in their creation?
- 5C What are the key skills involved in the interpretation of maps?

5.0.1 The Wave, Paria Canyon, USA. These sandstone formations were initially eroded by water run-off. After the water dried up, they continued to be eroded by wind and sand.

Ecotaxation Timothy O'Riordan,2014-04-23 Ecotaxation covers two distinct ideas To date it has largely been associated with the polluter pays principle in the form of correctional charges imposed on activities which have a demonstrably damaging effect on the quality of life or the environment The other involves a more ambitious policy shift aiming to put taxation onto a different basis away from income and labour and onto resource depleting and environmentally damaging activities By going further and directing the additional revenue towards environmentally supportive and socially improving ends it can be part of the fiscal basis for sustainable development This volume explores the history of both ideas but with more emphasis on the wider ranging policy alternatives that ecotaxation represents The contributors look at the mixed records of the correctional economic instruments which have been introduced suggesting that unless they are integrated into a more comprehensive package of reforms they are not likely to have much effect on the direction of an already unsustainable economy On the other hand taxation has the potential not only to stimulate sustainable forms of economic activity but also by lowering the costs of work and employment to create jobs and greater social justice At a time when governments room for manoeuvre is being more and more restricted by conflicting social economic and environmental commitments and pressures revenue neutral ecotaxation has a crucial role to play in reconciling those objectives and putting policy onto a new and lasting footing
