

SQUARE UP 2

Lab Notes: Punnett Squares—Answer Key

- These charts are called Punnett Squares and they're completed using letters rather than colors. The letter is always taken from the dominant gene so in this case, that's R for Red. The recessive gene is shown as the lower case, so r = brown! Complete the gene letters for each of these combinations.

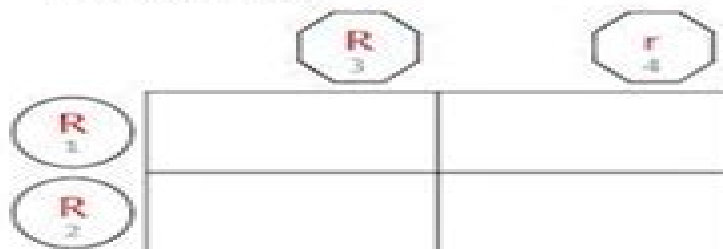

The second one is done for you.

Red/Red R R

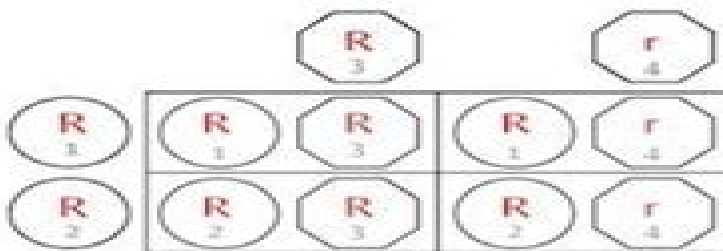

Red/brown R r

brown/brown r r

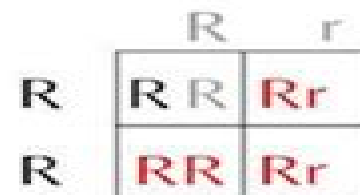

- If the first parent is Red/Red, write in the gene letters in the circles (1 and 2).
- If the second parent is Red/brown, write in the gene letters in the octagon (3 and 4). Leave the rest blank for now.

- Each parent can give either gene to each of its offspring. Fill in the letters in the following chart to show this. Note the pattern.

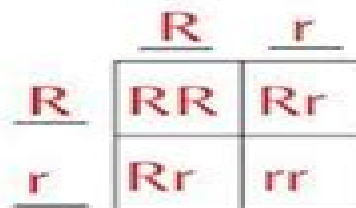

- The charts are written simply, with the letters of one parent vertically on the left and the genes of the other parent horizontally across the top. Complete the chart just as we did before:

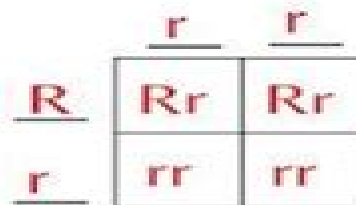

- How many offspring here are Red? all 4
- How many are brown? 0

Complete the following charts for practice.

- Both parents with Red/brown (Rr) genes

- One parent with Red/brown (Rr) genes and the other with brown/brown (rr) genes.
