

Population Growth

How is population growth usually represented?

Model 1

The curve used predicted is exponential growth. It takes 25 generations to double the number of cells, which means that population is doubling, and is doubled to reach 1000 in 250 generations. This is not realistic because there are growth limitations such as environmental constraints and lack of resources to grow indefinitely.

Model 2 - Population Growth

1. Refer to Model 1.

- a. What is the demographic population model used here?
- b. What is the demographic population growth curve?
- c. Name two factors that would act to increase the population size.
- d. Name two factors that would act to decrease the population size.

2. Using Model 1 and the letters A, B, C, and D write mathematical representations for the types of population growth shown below. Show what each type may be related.

- a. A stable population (the number of organisms is not changing).
- b. A stable population (the number of organisms is decreasing).
- c. A growing population (the number of organisms is increasing).

Model 3 - Bacterial Growth

1. Refer to Model 3.

- a. What does the exponential growth model represent?
- b. What stage of bacterial growth is most likely to be the population in the stage?
- c. What stage of bacterial growth is most likely to be the population in the stage?
- d. What stage of bacterial growth is most likely to be the population in the stage?
