

THE GREATEST FIGHT OF ALL TIME THE LEGEND BEGINS!

After being rescued from his cruel master, abandoned and alone, little Axl (Shane) returns to his adoptive father's place to find his parents dead and country destroyed. Having lost both his home and his family, he must try to slowly rebuild alongside the thousands captured by the T-100s in 1984—including a woman named Sarah and her adopted son, whom he takes into the protective custody of his home.

But as these struggling survivors begin to restore a semblance of stability, a new and unprecedented threat appears on the horizon—a terrifying, colossal creature from the deep that their exhausted spirits cannot defend against. With no hope of aid from the surviving forces, not a helping strike of angels, how can they survive to defeat this deadly beast?

Whether you've already seen the movie, or just heard of the exciting debut, immerse into the world of Godzilla: King of the Monsters in this gripping novelization penned by the film's Academy Award®-winning director Michael Bay!

Translation, Authorship and the Victorian Professional Woman Lesa Scholl, 2016-02-17 In her study of Charlotte Bront Harriet Martineau and George Eliot Lesa Scholl shows how three Victorian women writers broadened their capacity for literary professionalism by participating in translation and other conventionally derivative activities such as editing and reviewing early in their careers In the nineteenth century a move away from translating Greek and Latin Classical texts in favour of radical French and German philosophical works took place As England colonised the globe Continental philosophies penetrated English shores causing fissures of faith understanding and cultural stability The influence of these new texts in England was unprecedented and Eliot Bront and Martineau were instrumental in both literally and figuratively translating these ideas for their English audience Each was transformed by access to foreign languages and cultures first through the written word and then by travel to foreign locales and the effects of this exposure manifest in their journalism travel writing and fiction Ultimately Scholl argues their study of foreign languages and their translation of foreign language texts nations and cultures enabled them to transgress the physical and ideological boundaries imposed by English middle class conventions

How Does it Feel? Charlotte Bosseaux,2007

Narratology is concerned with the study of narratives but surprisingly it does not usually distinguish between original and translated texts This lack of distinction is regrettable In recent years the visibility of translations and translators has become a widely discussed topic in Translation Studies yet the issue of translating a novel s point of view has remained relatively unexplored It seems crucial to ask how far a translator s choices affect the novel s point of view and whether characters or narrators come across similarly in originals and translations This book addresses exactly these questions It proposes a method by which it becomes possible to investigate how the point of view of a work of fiction is created in an original and adapted in translation It shows that there are potential problems involved in the translation of linguistic features that constitute point of view and that this has an impact on the way works are translated
