The Economic Situation

At the beginning of the nineteenth century, the timber industry had replaced the fur trade as the economic engine of British North America.

In the first half of the 1800s, logging replaced the fur trade as Canada's dominant industry. (As portrayed in Canada: A People's History)

Canada's economy depended heavily on its export trade to England.

In 1806, Napoleon Bonaparte imposed a blockade on all of Europe preventing trade with England. Deprived of wood from Scandinavia, England turned instead to Canada's forests. The wood was mostly used for building ships. England had to build ships in order to pursue its war against Napoleon.

Each year, hundreds of ships loaded with oak and elm left Quebec City, the capital of Lower Canada, and Saint John, New Brunswick, heading for Great Britain. The Royal William, the first steamship to cross the Atlantic, was built in Quebec, one of the main centres for shipbuilding.

In Lower Canada, land became more and more difficult to obtain under the seigneurial regime.

The landowners, the seigneurs, demanded ever-higher rents. The shortage of new land to clear forced many peasants to abandon agriculture and look for work in the towns.

By 1830, Montreal had become the principal economic centre of the two Canadas. Its wealth was controlled by a handful of merchants and industrialists from the anglophone upper classes, men such as Peter McGill who became president of the Bank of Montreal in 1834. Rue Saint-Laurent / St. Lawrence Blvd. became an invisible barrier between rich and poor, anglophone and francophone.

Bromley, 2011 Fundamental world changes that simultaneously undermine a nation state s charisma and promote the rise of a supra national system have wide ranging effects upon national states within a modern global society My dissertation empirically examines the effects of social and cultural globalization on systems of mass schooling which are central institutions in every country Globally primary and secondary education initially emerged as the premier tool for nation states to create a unified national citizenry loyal to their country and socialized into a common cultural tradition I examine the extent to which this original nationalizing purpose of schooling is challenged by the increased emphases on universal human rights and diversity in civic education The analyses consist of two sections Hierarchical linear models are used to analyze a unique primary data source of 521 social science textbooks from 74 countries during the period 1970-2008. These findings show a worldwide increase in emphasis on human rights and increases in discussions of diversity in well-established liberal democracies. Cross-national quantitative analyses are complemented by a qualitative case study of social science curricula in British Columbia, BC, which examines nation building within a context of strong emphasis on diversity and human rights. The BC study utilizes currently approved high school citizenship education textbooks as well as older textbooks dating back to 1871. It also draws on a selection of historical documents including Ministry of Education reports, curricular frameworks, and high school exit exams. Process-wise, I find the incorporation of human rights and diversity reflects macro-level changes in national and global society. Content-wise, I find four main approaches to reconciling ideas of human rights and diversity with national identity: 1) framing human rights and multiculturalism as part of national identity; 2) using pedagogical approaches that promote multiple perspectives and individual agency; 3) celebrating social and scientific figures and accomplishments as the source of national pride; and 4) drawing on exogenous sources to affirm state legitimacy. This study is one of the first to theorize that civic education worldwide is moving away from a national focus and to provide empirical evidence of this trend. A key implication is that educational systems are being repurposed from their original goal of constructing a unitary national citizenry to a new view emphasizing human diversity and equality in a globally interconnected world. Further, students are increasingly taught that the global civil society and non-state actors are important and legitimate agents of social change.
