

Lesson Three - English 101 - This I Believe Essay Ms. Kelly E. Anthony-Gratton

You will find that essay assignments will slightly overlap over the next couple of weeks. While revising one essay, you will be working on creating another. I will try hard to pace you carefully. I recommend you use your blog to draft and free-write.

The This I Believe essay is a personal narrative.

PRE-WRITING

To write this essay, complete the following steps.

On your blog, compose a personal credo that distills your unique approach to life into a short statement of no more than 250 words. We'll have time to add flesh to this skeleton later, but for now you're simply defining your belief as precisely as possible. You can begin using one of the beliefs statements you have previously posted. For this exercise to be meaningful, you must make it wholly your own. This short statement isn't all you believe; it's simply a way to introduce others to some things you value. In spite of the name, your credo need not be religious or even public. You may decide to focus on commitments to family, service, political action, or the arts. As you look for a focus, try to choose concrete language and to find something that helps others understand your past, present, and future choices.

The following exercises can be completed to help you write your credo. Don't forget that you can post all of this writing on your blog.

Exercise One - Credo Research Exercise. As you begin to articulate your own credo, spend some time reflecting on creeds that have shaped political, social, or religious movements you're interested in. Spend 15–20 minutes researching statements that have galvanized a group of people or shaped a movement. Would you consider the Preamble to the Constitution or the Communist Manifesto as creeds? Do Amnesty International, Greenpeace, or other campus groups use statements of belief to identify themselves?

Exercise Two - Freewrite in response to one of the This I Believe Essays posted on the instructional site. You might consider the following. What do you relate to? What might you disagree with? Is disagreement okay? Why?

Can creeds be negative as well as positive statements, dividing as well as uniting people? In an interview on "The Need for Creeds," Jaroslav Pelikan suggests, "in the darkest hours of life, you've got to believe something specific, and that specification is the task of the creed, because, much as some people may not like it, to believe one thing is also to disbelieve another. To say yes is also to say no." Would you agree that human societies need creeds?
