Bullying

Bullying is of all times, but a more recent phenomenon is cyber bullying in which the bully uses email, text messages, twitter and other social media or online forums to hurt the victim. It is no surprise that celebrities who are constantly in the public eye are cyber-bullied relentlessly. Celebrities are criticized literally for every move they make. A lot of the comments are about looks. This may have to do with past experiences as surprisingly many celebrities have been the victim of bullying when they were young. Bullying is a serious problem to such an extent that many children and teenagers are afraid to go to school. The main reasons for becoming a victim of bullying are appearance and social status. Bullies attack their victims physically and psychologically. Bullying can have terrible effects on its victims. Schoolwork may suffer, but also health. Research suggests that victims may suffer from mental health problems later in life such as depression, low self-esteem and anxiety. This doesn't have to be the case though. Many famous people have been bullied as a child and despite this experience have become very successful.

Batman actor Christian Bale used to be beaten up a lot when he was a kid. He feels that it has made him stronger. It was for him a lesson for life. Christian didn't hit back. Violence often makes things worse as you don't know what the bully's response will be. Using violence could in the end have brought him more trouble.

Actor and singer Selena Gomez was bullied all the way through elementary and middle school. She said that it was her energy and focus that made her a target. Ultimately, the experience has made her a stronger person.
