Reading The Family Dance Family Systems Therapy And Literary Study:

Reading the Family Dance John V. Knapp, Kenneth Womack, 2003 The development in recent years of the intersections between the family and literary study continues to emerge as one of the most productive and illuminating arenas of contemporary critique In addition to addressing the family dynamic through which a given literary character develops a fully realized sense of self family systems therapy allows readers to examine the patterns by which characters function in their larger intimate systems whether those systems be social institutional or even global As the intellectual foundation for the forms of therapy practiced by the majority of contemporary American and European psychotherapists the study of family systems theory and its intersections with literary works affords readers with an illuminating glimpse into the terminology and processes involved in this dynamic form of critique Perhaps most significantly family systems therapy allows critics to consider the distinctly social interactions that characterise our pathways to interpersonal development and selfhood John V Knapp is Professor of English with a joint appointment in modern literature and in teacher education at Northern Illinois University Kenneth Womack is Assist this book develops a literary theory of the historical alternativeness principle and applies it to the reading of The City with All That is Therein It is one of the most important and less studied books of the greatest Israeli writer Nobel Prize winner S Y Agnon 1887-1970 The investigation reveals that this principle is by no means inherent solely in modernism and postmodernism but lies at the very basis of the reading process particularly at the levels of plot and character origination and historical and historiographical conceptions that underlie the author's imagination The book is intended for all who are interested in modern literature and theory and national wealth along with transformations in the practices of personal and institutional charity profoundly altered cultural understandings of the gift's rationale, purpose and function. Drawing on materials such as sermons, conduct books, works of political philosophy and tracts on social reform, Zionkowski challenges the idea that capitalist discourse was the dominant influence on the development of prose fiction. Instead, by shifting attention to the gift system as it was imagined and enacted in the formative years of the novel, the volume offers an innovative understanding of how the economy of obligation shaped writers' portrayals of class and gender identity, property and community. Through theoretically informed readings of Richardson's Clarissa and Sir Charles Grandison, Burney's Cecilia and The Wanderer and Austen's Mansfield Park and Emma, the book foregrounds the issues of donation, reciprocity, indebtedness and gratitude as it investigates the conflicts between the market and moral economies and analyzes women's position at the center of these conflicts. As this study reveals, the exchanges that eighteenth-century fiction prescribed for women confirm the continuing power and importance of gift transactions in the midst of an increasingly commercial culture. The volume will be essential reading for scholars of the eighteenth-century novel, economic literary criticism, women and gender studies, and book history.

Defending Privilege

Nicole Mansfield Wright, 2020-03-10. A critique of attempts by conservative eighteenth and nineteenth-century authors to appropriate the rhetoric of victimhood and appeals to rights to safeguard the status of the powerful. As revolution and popular unrest roiled the final decades of the eighteenth century, authors, activists and philosophers across the British Empire hailed the rise of the liberal subject, valorizing the humanity of the marginalized and the rights of members of groups long considered inferior or subhuman. Yet at the same time, a group of conservative authors mounted a reactionary attempt to cultivate sympathy for the privileged. In Defending Privilege, Nicole Mansfield Wright examines works by Tobias Smollett, Charlotte Smith, Walter Scott and others to show how conservatives used the rhetoric of victimhood in attempts to convince ordinary readers to regard a privileged person's loss of legal agency as a catastrophe greater than the calamities and legally sanctioned exclusion suffered by the poor and the enslaved. In promoting their agenda, these authors resuscitated literary modes regarded at the time as derivative or passé, including romance, the gothic and epistolarity, or invented subgenres that are neglected today due to widespread revilement of their politics: the proslavery novel. Although these authors are not typically considered alongside one another in scholarship, they are united by their firsthand experience of legal conflict; each felt that their privilege was degraded through lengthy disputes. In examining the work of these eighteenth and early nineteenth-century authors, Wright traces a broader reactionary framework in the Anglophone literary legacy. Each novel seeks to reshape and manipulate public perceptions of who merits legal agency; the right to initiate a lawsuit, serve as a witness, seek counsel from a lawyer and take other legal actions. As a result, Defending Privilege offers a counterhistory to scholarship on the novel's capacity to motivate the promulgation of human rights and champion social ascendance through the upwardly mobile realist character.

Falling into Matter Elizabeth R. Napier, 2012-03-08. Falling into Matter examines the complex role of the body in the development of the English novel in the eighteenth century Elizabeth R Napier argues that despite an increasing emphasis on the need to present ideas in corporeal terms early fiction writers continued to register spiritual and moral reservations about the centrality of the body to human and imaginative experience Drawing on six works of early English fiction Daniel Defoe's Robinson Crusoe Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels Samuel Richardson's Clarissa Henry Fielding's Tom Jones Elizabeth Inchbald's A Simple Story and Mary Shelley's Frankenstein Napier examines how authors grappled with technical and philosophical issues of the body questioning its capacity for moral action its relationship to individual freedom and dignity and its role in the creation of art Falling into Matter charts the course of the early novel as its authors engaged formally stylistically and thematically with the increasingly insistent role of the body in the new genre

Ingratitude Erin Khuê Ninh, 2011-03-28 Anger and bitterness tend to pervade narratives by second generation Asian American daughters despite their largely unremarkable upbringings The author explores this apparent paradox locating in the origins of these women's immaterial suffering not only racial hegemonies but also the structure of the immigrant family itself She argues that the filial debt of these women both demands and defies repayment all the better to produce the docile subjects of a model minority Through readings of Jade Snow Wong's Fifth Chinese Daughter Maxine Hong Kingston's The Woman Warrior Evelyn Lau's Runaway Diary of a Street Kid Catherine Liu's Oriental Girls Desire Romance and other texts she offers an explication of the subjection and psyche of the Asian American daughter She connects common literary tropes to their theoretical underpinnings in power profit and subjection
