

Slavery, Civil War & Reconstruction - The Emancipation Proclamation

by President Lincoln

On September 22, 1862, President Lincoln decided that all slaves in the rebellious states were free. This rebellious part of the South was fighting against the Northern states because they wanted to secede, or separate from the Union. His announcement was called the Emancipation Proclamation. Emancipation means giving freedom. Part of Lincoln's declaration is below:

"I do hereby and declare that all persons held as slaves...shall be free. The Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authorities thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of said persons."
